HOOVER GROUP REVEALS WIDE REVOLT ON TAX

New Temper of Public Is Called Significant Development.

MORE LAWS TERMED CRIME BOOST CAUSE

Increase of 355 Per Cent in Per Capita Levy Burden Cited in Report.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Describing the Nation-wide revolt against high taxes and governmental extravagance as perhaps the outstanding social and political phenomena in the United States during the last five years, the President's research committee on social trends predicted in its final report, made public last night, that effective reform in the administration of public affairs now promises to stand as one of the major permanent benefits of the long economic depression.

"By far the most significant of recent developments in the field of American taxation," the report says, "is the new temper of the taxpaying public."

Pointing to an increase of 355 per cent in the average per capita tax burden of the United States between 1913 and 1930, the report adds that today's mood of the taxpayer is reflected "in a wave of budget slashing which lately has become epidemic."

Up to $84 Per Capita.

Against a total tax bill of $2,259,000,000 in 1913 for Federal, State and local administration, the report tabulates a combined bill of $10,300,000,000 for 1930, an increase from $23 to $84 per capita.

A widespread revolt against public expenditures has been closely organized throughout the States during the last two years, and the number of public organizations created to examine budgets and demand reductions gives the movement the appearance of a deeply rooted social phenomena.

The report, comprising 1,600 printed pages, is privately published. It carries a foreword by President Hoover reviewing the establishment of the volunteer research committee in 1929 and characterizing its findings as a comprehensive chart of prospective national development during the next decade.

All Aspects Contained.

Every aspect of social change from the development of beauty parlors and chain stores to the most recent trends in law, philosophy, religion and the arts, is exhaustively treated in the document, each section of which was prepared by a group of recognized experts in the field. Viewed as a whole, the report is perhaps the most complete, up-to-the-minute cross section of a great Nation in transition ever to come from the printing presses. It is a detailed picture of the United States of today superimposed upon that curious posture of human history which was prewar America.

The Volstead act is mentioned as one of the outstanding factors in the development of organized crime during the last decade, but the rapid increase in criminal laws of all kinds.

Young Pair Found Poisoned in Hall

Girl and Boy Are Treated at Hospital; Discovered by Passer-By.

Found lying in the hallway in an apartment house at 3800 New Hampshire avenue northwest, Miss Mary Reed, 24, 648 Munson place northwest, and Eddie Chrisman, 21, 3800 New Hampshire avenue, were treated at Emergency Hospital early today for effects of what was believed to have been some kind of mild poison.

They were found by Luther Stovers, 3541 Tenth street, who had been visiting in an apartment of the house. It was reported that they were engaged to be married. No reason for their act, however, had been established early today.

Great Britain Plans 1933 'Pocket' Cruiser

London, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Great Britain's 1933 naval program, it was understood today, will include a "pocket" cruiser similar to the "pocket" battleships being built by Germany.

The program, which probably will be started in the spring, includes two cruisers, two submarines, eight destroyers, two sloops, two mine sweepers, a depot ship and numerous auxiliaries.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Jan. 1 (A. P.).—A spectacular story of the sea was being enacted tonight on the Florida East Coast as half a dozen of the Coast Guard's fastest cutters dashed to the rescue of the twin-engined flying boat Arcturus, down in the Atlantic Ocean off Fort Pierce, with three men aboard.

Although the plane had been considered in no immediate danger of

FIVE PERSONS DEAD IN ELKS HOME FIRE

Debris Is Being Searched at Vallejo, Calif., for More Bodies.

Vallejo, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Five men sleeping in the Elks Club building here burned to death today in a fire that destroyed the three-story wooden structure.

A sixth, an unidentified guest, was missing, and fear was expressed that other guests, who may have remained in the club dormitory after a New Year celebration last night, might have perished.

The victims were identified as E. J. Swasey, club caretaker; Edward Geering and William Mitchell, retired Vallejo business men; E. A. Fogarty and Frank Wiggin, Mare Island employes.

Two other club residents escaped after the fire started. One of them was treated for burns and the other for shock.

A committee of firemen and club officials inspected the building at 4:30 a. m. today, after the celebrators had departed. They were seeking smouldering tobacco ashes or other fire hazards. An hour after they left the building the entire facade was discovered to be in flames and an alarm was sounded.

The entire Vallejo Fire Department, augmented by apparatus from the Mare Island Navy Yard, began to pour water on the fire. Then finding the building was doomed, firemen concentrated on saving adjoining structures.

While smoke and flames were pouring from every window in the facade, Thomas Gaffney, a club resident, was seen to climb from his window to a ledge high above the street.

While he poised, apparently deliberating whether to make a leap of about 75 feet, firemen reached the ledge with a ladder. Gaffney was led down it to safety. He was treated for burns of the face, hands, feet and body.

Elks Club officials believed at first that Gaffney and Milton Cutler, another resident, who escaped by climbing to a rear roof, were the only guests. Firemen raking the embers, however, discovered five bodies. They drenched the ashes and planned to continue the hunt under searchlights tonight.

The building, valued at $80,000, was insured for $32,000. It was formerly a girls' school. Only one staircase was in the building. It was centrally located and probably formed a flue, up which the flames roared, firemen said.

Annapolis Hotel's Manager Stabbed

Hugh Neason at Hospital After Mystery Attack During Revelry.

Hugh Neason, manager of the Annapolis Hotel, was stabbed with a knife by an unidentified assailant shortly after midnight yesterday, when he tried to eject a boisterous merrymaker from the room.

Fourteen persons in the hotel witnessed the attack and described the assailant as a swarthy skinned, foreign-looking man. Neason was taken to the Emergency Hospital in an undetermined condition.

Witnesses booked by police are Jack Nolan, Samuel B. Iseman, William G. Fritz, Mrs. Almerta Iseman, Mrs. Abby, A. C. Abby, Mrs. Henrietta Gluck, Emanuel Neason, Mrs. Eli Fritz, Arthur J. Fritz, Helen C. Fritz, Dr. Ernest Mitchell, Mrs. Elizabeth Heyne and Quentin Heyne.

U.S. FILM ACTRESS ENDS LIFE IN PARIS

Frances Johnson, "Wampas Baby Star," Is Suicide After Party.

Paris, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Miss Frances Johnson, said to have been a "Wampas baby star" in Hollywood, committed suicide in a fashionable Paris hotel today after a night spent in touring the cafes and night clubs of Montmartre.

The titian-haired girl, who was 21 years old and native of Denver, Colo., was found dying in her room by Robert Harrari, an Egyptian writer, whom she met in Hollywood and to whom she was said to have been engaged to marry.

With Harrari and his brother, Gustave, she had spent New Year's Eve touring Montmartre and returned to the Champs Elysees hotel, where she had been living since mid-November, at about 7 a. m.

Shortly after retiring to her room, Robert Harrari and other guests of the hotel heard screaming.

"Robert!" she cried, "I've taken poison! Robert! I love you!"

By the time a physician arrived, she was dead. Two bottles, believed to have contained poison, were found in her room.

Gustave Harrari said Miss Johnson and his brother were engaged to marry. Robert, he said, was born in Alexandria, Egypt, and worked for various motion-picture concerns in Hollywood. He wrote the scenario for a film, Gustave said, in which Miss Johnson appeared.

Miss Johnson was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson, of Los Angeles, Gustave said.

A preliminary police inquiry led officials to believe the girl killed herself in a fit of mental depression, and that the act was not premeditated. She left no letter.

The body is to be taken to the morgue, where an autposy will be performed.

Old Persian Relics At Library Stolen

Antique Thieves Get Rare Treasures in Raid at Plainfield, N. J.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A rare and valuable collection of Persian antiques, dating back to the sixteenth century, was stolen during the night from the Plainfield Public Library, police learned today.

The theft was discovered by the janitor, Robert Minnick. The collection had been loaned to the library by Dr. A. D. Yussef, of Fifth avenue, New York, widely known as a collector.

Among the articles reported stolen were an illuminated page of the poem, "The Rubaiyat," by Omar Khayyam; a number of Persian classics, three water pipes, one trimmed in gold and the other two in silver; a large shawl said to have come from the throne room of the shah, and a number of rugs. The entire collection was valued at $50,000, police said.

LAST MARINES LEAVE POSTS IN NICARAGUA

U. S. Feels That Work of Stabilizing Nation Is Now Finished.

RETURN OF FORCES IS PLEDGED AGAINST

Troops Lauded by Adams and Appeal for Their Aid Is Recalled.

(Associated Press.)

The withdrawal of the Marines yesterday from Nicaragua is considered by the State Department as the end of the special relationship by which the United States intervened six years ago in Nicaragua's internal affairs.

In a review of the period of Marine occupation, the State Department yesterday promised that "No American armed forces will remain in that country, either as instructors in the constabulary, as a legation guard, or in any capacity whatsoever."

Saying the Marines were sent to Nicaragua in 1926 at the request of authorities there to protect American lives, the report added they remained there under an agreement with Nicaragua which ended the civil war, for a two-fold purpose: First, to organize and train a nonpartisan national constabulary; and secondly, to supervise the elections of 1928, 1930 and 1932. All these conditions have been fulfilled, the State Department said.

Marines' Work Lauded.

Expressing satisfaction with the work of the Marines and the development of a sense of political responsibility in the Nicaraguan people, the report added:

"Both Nicaraguan political parties to the agreement which ended the civil war supported the disbanding of the old National army, which had frequently been an instrument of undisguised political aggression. In its place, at the request of Nicaragua, American officers and enlisted men have organized and trained an entirely new and nonpartisan force, the Guardia Nacional grounded upon the fundamental precept of service to the country as a whole. * * * It is noteworthy that both political parties have agreed on their own initiative to

Envoy of Turkey To America Quits

Fethi Bey Is Mentioned as Successor Here to Ahmet Muhtar Bey.

Angora, Turkey, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Ahmet Muhtar Bey, Ambassador to the United States, today asked that he be retired.

It was considered probable that he will be succeeded by Fethi Bey, former Ambassador to Paris and one-time leader of the short-lived Liberal party when President Mustapha Kemal Pasha attempted to establish a two-party government.

Hemdi Bey, Minister to Austria since 1925, was recently mentioned for the post in Washington, but it was understood here that Mr. Fethi is preferred.

TAKES CONTROL

DR. JUAN B. SACASA, New President of Nicaragua.

ROOSEVELT WILL GO TO MUSCLE SHOALS

Plans Inspection Tour With Norris Late This Month; Conference Slated.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Free from the duties of New York Governor, Franklin D. Roosevelt found himself today already deep in the engrossing problems of national government which he must direct after March 4.

He announced a plan to visit the gigantic Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant over which a contest has waged in Congress between the advocates of Government ownership and private operation since this war-time property of the Nation became inactive at the conclusion of hostilities in 1918.

Indicative of his attitude, Mr. Roosevelt dispatched an invitation to the veteran Senator Norris, Nebraska Republican independent, who has led the fight for Government control, to accompany him on the visit late this month.

To a more immediate and pressing problem—the balancing of the national budget by this session of Congress—the President-elect will give his attention at a conference with Democratic congressional leaders in finance at his New York City home on Thursday night.

There is every indication that the congressional chieftains will bring to Mr. Roosevelt a new plan for raising additional taxes which now appear necessary. The fact that the ranking members of the Senate and House

Show Managers Post Collaterals

Notified by Police That Midnight Programs Violated Law.

Managers of Washington theaters which conducted New Year's Eve entertainments after midnight were notified by police that they had violated the ordinance prohibiting amusement performances between 12 a. m. and 2 p. m. on Sunday.

All the managers are said to have appeared at police precinct stations and deposited collaterals of $25. Police believed that the managers would forfeit their collaterals.

In addition to the theater managers, the manager of the dance marathon also was held for violation of the ordinance.

Six New Peers Are Named In 1933 British Honor List

Sir Joseph Duveen, Art Connoisseur, Who Married Elsie Salaman, of New York, Among Those Elevated; 28 Made Knights and 6 Barons.

London, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Six new peers were created in the New Year's honor list announced today.

Others honored included two men who were elevated to privy councillorships, six to baronetcies, and 28 who were made knights.

Sir Joseph Duveen, art dealer and connoisseur, was named a baron and heads the list of new peers. He became a knight in 1919 and a baronet in 1926. Sir Joseph is a director and president of the firm of Duveen Brothers of London, New York and Paris and for years has been a trustee of several art galleries. Governments of Holland, Great Britain, Belgium and Serbia have decorated him for his efforts in the field of art.

In 1899 he married Elsie Salaman, daughter of Gustav Salaman, of New York.

Sir Thomas Horder, one of the king's physicians and physician in ordinary to the Prince of Wales since 1923, also was elevated from baronet to baron. For years he has held high posts in several London hospitals and has published books on medical diagnosis, clinical pathology and other medical subjects.

Others who were created barons today are Field Marshal Sir George Milne, Sir Charles Nall-Cain, Sir Rennell Rodd and Sir Walter Runciman, father of Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade.

Sir Walter is a prominent ship owner and director of shipping lines and has written several works on sailers, wind jammers, Napoleon, and sea heroes.

Sir George since 1926 has been chief of the imperial general staff. He has seen service with his majesty's forces in many parts of the world and won decorations from many other governments.

Sir Rennell served his majesty in several diplomatic roles and a few years ago was the American nonnational member of the Permanent International Commission for Ad-

Police Check Past Of Dead 'Murderer'

They Doubt Confession of Baker Killing; Think Man Knew Real Slayer.

Howard Simms, 24, colored, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital several hours after he had confessed to slaying Mary Baker. Although police placed little credence in his statement, it is thought that Simms may have known the slayer.

Police are investigating the possibility that he may have met the murderer of Mary Baker at the Lorton Reformatory. It was established that he had been arrested there April 11, 1930, the day of the slaying.

Simms was shot last week when he attacked a policeman. He insisted that he was guilty of the slaying and accurately described the grounds around the culvert near Arlington Cemetery where the girl's body was found. He told police that he threw the gun with which he killed her into nearby woods.

3 Killed and Scores Hurt in Berlin Riots

Berlin, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Three persons were killed and scores of others were wounded in political clashes here on New Year's Eve and today.

Police reported 20 clashes, in which they estimated 300 were hurt.

BULLET-RIDDLED BODY FOUND NEAR DISTRICT LINE BY BOYS ON HIKE

Larry Fay, New York Gang Figure, Is Slain

Night Club Doorman, Disgruntled Over Cut in Salary, Blamed in Death of Man Who Gave Texas Guinan Start.

New York, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Larry Fay, who lived under constant threat of death for years as one of the "big shots" of Manhattan's gangland, was killed tonight in a dispute over wages with a night club doorman.

Two bullets from a wavering .32-caliber revolver held by the intoxicated employe ended the career of the night club owner who once rode in an armored automobile.

Police, commanded by Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney himself, broadcast orders to arrest Edward Maloney, doorman of the Casa Blanca, where the shooting occurred.

The economic depression—which struck the carefree habitues of New York's night clubs like everyone else—led indirectly to Fay's death after a career marked by roughshod defiance of law.

The Casa Blanca opened December 15 in a four-story white stone building at 33 West Fifty-sixth street, which formerly had housed Owney Madden's Club Napoleon. Its returns were slim and Fay decided to economize by cutting the wages of his doorman from $100 a week to $60.

Maloney objected, drank heavily and became abusive, other employes of the luxuriously furnished club told police.

Tonight the doorman accosted Fay in the foyer and demanded money. Fay sent an employe for cash. Three shots rang out and when the messenger rushed back, Fay lay on the thick carpet, dying. Maloney had disappeared.

A comparatively small crowd was in the Casa Blanca—it was too early for merrymakers after the heavy New Year's Eve celebrating. Most of them did not hear the shots.

Word that Fay had been killed brought the police commissioner to the scene, although authorities have

SWIFT BEER ACTION FORESEEN IN SENATE

Committee Hearing Begins Today in Upper Chamber on House Measure.

(Associated Press.)

Swift consideration, beginning today, of beer and prohibition repeal legislation is promised by Senate leaders.

A meeting of the Senate judiciary committee has been called to begin consideration of the House 3.2 per cent beer bill, and the subcommittee framing a repeal resolution will be summoned within a day or two.

Should absence of a quorum, because of the legal holiday, again block action today on the beer bill, Chairman Norris has announced he will call another meeting early this week. With the Senate returning to work tomorrow, he should have no difficulty then in obtaining the necessary majority.

The repeal subcommittee is near an agreement on the wording of a resolution to wipe the eighteenth amendment from the statute books, and members of the group predicted yesterday they would be able to report within a few days.

Their tentative draft provides protection for dry States from surrounding wet territory, and gives Congress authority to legislate against return of the saloon.

The only remaining question is the manner of submitting the resolution to the States. Some members of the subcommittee prefer to have it acted upon by State conventions, while

NEW CURBS SOUGHT IN CARRIER BATTLES

Coordination of Rail, Water and Highway Traffic Is Chamber Report Plea.

(Associated Press.)

A plan to put new curbs on competition in the transportation industry to insure the best coordination of rail, water and highway traffic was suggested yesterday by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

"The committee agrees," said a statement from the chamber, "that unregulated competition with regulated forms of comparable transportation is unfair, contrary to the public interest in the losses which are caused, and inequitable to shippers whose interest is in dependable service and conditions."

Eighteen suggestions for regulation of shipping by boat and truck and passenger carrying by buses were set forth. They called for governmental supervision of domestic ocean, lake and river shipping, much like the present railroad regulation.

Direction of highway transportation would be left to the States, but uniform regulations were outlined.

The committee said the Federal Government should give up its inland waterway barge lines.

"Of the transportation agencies," the statement continued, "the railroads are the chief sufferers, and under present depressed conditions

Two Held in New York After Kidnap Threat

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Two men were arrested today on a charge of threatening to kidnap and kill the daughter of Valentine Watrell, wire frame manufacturer, unless he paid $1,000. Watrell sent his 18-year-old daughter out of town and turned the case over to police after receiving the extortion demands.

The prisoners, arrested when one of them allegedly sought to collect the money, were booked as John Nitoli, 24, and Adam Pan, 17.

Drug Store Robbed Of Stamps and Rum

Narcotics and Cash Also Included in Loot of New Year's Thieves.

More than $120 worth of 3-cent stamps, several cases of liquor, $150 worth of narcotics and an unestimated sum of currency and cash were stolen from the Taft Drug Store, at 3300 Wisconsin avenue northwest, during the revelry of New Year's morning, it was reported to police yesterday.

The thieves entered the establishment by jimmying a heavy iron door in the cellar.

Federal authorities investigated the robbery together with District police on account of the postage stamps and narcotics stolen. Federal authorities believe there is a good chance of tracing the thieves through the stamps because of the difficulty the crooks will encounter in disposing of such a large supply.

Corpse Thrown in Bushes Along Side Road.

VICTIM SHOT SEVEN TIMES

Lack of Blood Labels Crime Ride Murder; Heavy Bettor.

The body of a sleekly dressed and swarthy young man, murdered by a deliberate volley of copper-jacketed bullets while echoes of the New Year gayety were still in the air, was found by a party of boy hikers on Jones Mill road adjoining North Chevy Chase, in Montgomery County, yesterday afternoon.

Face downward in a patch of brush along the road, the corpse was tentatively identified as that of Julio Lelli, 28. Police quickly jumped to the theory that the slaying took place elsewhere and called for aid from Washington detectives.

Hurrying to the scene, a Washington police detail, headed by Detective Sergts. Dennis J. Murphy and George Darnall, both of the Homicide Squad, soon gathered a number of clews, and last night expected momentarily to contact a close friend of the dead man, who they believed could throw light on his murder.

Race Slips in Pockets.

The murdered man—his olive skin and features led many to say he was a Sicilian—carried betting slips showing he or some one he acted for had been betting continuously and heavily on the races. Some transactions indicated by the slips showed nearly $2,000 worth of play in a single day. Some of the slips were for bets of $30 to $100 across the board on single races.

Speakeasy cards of liquor resorts in Washington, Maryland and New York were found in his clothes, and detectives last night were checking these places in an effort to plumb the New Year mystery.

His overcoat and suit had been purchased from a Washington clothing dealer, while the remainder of his garments were bought in New York.

The discovery was made by four Southwest Washington lads as they trudged along on a holiday hike. Their find started Montgomery County police and Washington detectives on the search for the perpetrators of what looked like a gang slaying. Finding of a pin, believed to be that of an Italian secret society, on the man's vest provided a valuable clew for investigators.

Car Tracks Found.

Seven shots were fired into the body—one in the head, one in the heart, one in the stomach, one in the left leg, two in the left arm and one in the right arm. Police were awaiting an autopsy to determine if there were more.

Tracks of an automobile that had stopped or paused at the scene were being studied last night. Montgomery County authorities were confident the murder occurred elsewhere and the body brought to the remote road to delay investigation.

Tentative identification of the man was made by a New York driver's license in his pocket. This was made out to Julio Lelli, 28, of 98 Cortlandt street, North Tarrytown, N. Y.

PALMER QUESTIONS BECK REPEAL VIEW

Wilson Cabinet Member Says Congress Has Right to Pass on Delegates.

(Associated Press.)

A Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General in the Wilson Cabinet, contends there's no doubt Congress has the right to call and regulate the time and manner of choosing delegates to State conventions for consideration of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Taking issue with Representative Beck (Republican), Pennsylvania, yesterday, Palmer, in a statement issued here, said: "The Constitution is a covenant made by the people" and "the people have the sole right to decide whether the Constitution should be changed."

Palmer said Beck took the position, in a recent speech in the House, that "the Constitution was a result of a compact between the States as sovereign governments" and that consequently the State governments should have complete control of the proposed conventions.

Cites Supreme Court Ruling.

"If there is any one question which the Supreme Court has repeatedly and clearly decided, it is that the Constitution was the creation of the sovereign people and not a compact between the States," Palmer said, adding:

"The Supreme Court has further decided that when the Legislatures act in ratifying or refusing to ratify constitutional amendments, they are performing a Federal function granted by the people, and that Congress has the power to prescribe the time within which action shall be taken. * * *

Sees No Conflict.

"It is not necessary that the Congress should go into great detail in regulating the methods of calling and holding these conventions, or interfere unduly with the ordinary functions of a State. There need be no conflict of jurisdiction in the exercise of a purely national power by the people themselves. In order to assure prompt action, it is only necessary that Congress do four things: First, fix the date of elections; second, set the limit of time thereafter within which the conventions shall assemble; third, announce the principle which shall govern the nomination and election of delegates, so that the issue shall be fairly and directly presented to the people, and fourth, pay all expenses of elections and conventions."

Mr. Palmer sent a brief of his arguments to members of Congress several weeks ago he issued another elaborate brief in support of his ideas, and it was with this that Representative Beck took issue.

FAY, NEW YORK GANG FIGURE, IS SHOT DEAD

ceased to list Fay as an important racketeer.

The tall gaunt Fay had once been a power in milk and taxicab rackets. However, Mulrooney said he "hadn't been doing anything much—as far as we know—for the past several months."

It was Fay who gave Texas Guinan her first important job. He made the wise-cracking, blonde Texas girl hostess in one of his night clubs and her gay salute to pleasure-seekers: "Hello Sucker!" made her known even in the hinterland where Fay was never heard of.

Fay was quoted as saying in June, 1931, that he had just married Evelyn Crowell, show girl, fifteen years younger than he.

No one came to claim the body immediately, and police prepared to send it to the morgue.

Police briskly cleaned up investigation at the club. Fay's tall form lay nearly unnoticed in the lavishly furnished foyer, almost within sight of the club's famous circular bar.

Thus perished—at the hands of a disgruntled employe—one who once rode in an armored automobile and commanded hundreds of followers within and without the law.

SWIFT BEER ACTION FORESEEN IN SENATE

others want it sent to the State Legislatures.

Chairman Blaine plans to call a meeting of the subcommittee tomorrow or Wednesday, to resume where it left off before the Christmas recess.

Virtually every member of the committee who has been in the Capital during the recess has expressed himself in favor of swift action on the beer bill.

Another expression of this kind came yesterday from Senator King, of Utah, Democratic member of the committee, who said the Senate would be derelict in its duty if it did not bring the issue to a vote.

A disposition to let the bill come to a vote quickly in its present form has developed among some opponents as well as friends of the measure in the belief that it is headed for a veto from President Hoover anyway.

The President, though, has refrained from public comment on the measure.

Among those honored with baronetcies are Sir Owen Seaman, editor of the humorous periodical Punch, and Sir Ernest Musgrave Harvey, deputy governor of the Bank of England.

Joseph G. Latham, minister of foreign affairs in the new Australian government, was made a member of the privy council.

One of two ecclesiastics named companions of honor is the Rev. John Scott Lidgett, president of the Methodist Church.

There were predictions before the announcement of the list that Capt. James A. Mollison and his wife, Amy Johnson, world-famous fliers, would be honored, but their names were not included in the list.

Sir George Perley, minister without portfolio in the Canadian government, was made Knight of the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Tobacco Families United

Richard Joshua Reynolds, Jr., Heir to Fortune, Is Married to Elizabeth Dillard, Winston-Salem Beauty.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Richard Joshua Reynolds, jr., and Miss Elizabeth McCaw Dillard were married in a ceremony which joined two of Winston-Salem's "tobacco families" here today.

Reynolds, 26 years old, is the eldest son of the late R. J. Reynolds, who founded the tobacco company which bears his name, and is heir to about 20 millions of the fortune his father built from tobacco.

John L. Dillard, father of the bride, is a contractor, but her grandfather, Will Taylor, launched the first tobacco manufacturing enterprise in Winston-Salem. Mrs Reynolds is two years younger than her husband.

The wedding was a simple ceremony in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, conducted by the rector, the Rev. Robert E. Cribbin. Miss Dillard wore a dark blue tailored ensemble and carried only a prayer book, with a chain of lilies of the valley. She had one attendant, Mrs. J. T. Barnes, of Winston-Salem, a cousin of Reynolds.

Reynolds wore a dark business suit. He was attended by John Graham of Winston-Salem.

St. Paul's Church was packed, with Winston-Salem's high and low for the ceremony. In a special section of the gallery sat a group of Negro servants of the Reynolds and Dillard families.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds left on a motor trip. He refused to disclose their destination, but friends said they would go to San Fernando, Calif.

In about three weeks they will return here and live at Reynolda, palatial estate built by Reynolds' father, and scene, last summer, of the fatal shooting of Smith Reynolds, brother of Richard, who is known to his intimates as "Dick."

Indirectly, Smith's death was connected with today's wedding.

Dick, who has spent most of the past several years traveling, was on a cruise off the coast of East Africa when he received news his brother had been found fatally wounded at Reynolds.

He returned to Winston-Salem and his romance with Miss Dillard, a childhood acquaintance, developed.

Libby Holman, Broadway torch singer and Smith Reynolds' bride of a few months, was indicted with Albert Walker, of Winston-Salem, for murder in connection with her husband's death, but the charges later were dropped.

Friends of Reynolds said he would go into business here when he returns. His father's fortune was left in trust and he will not receive his share of it until April 7, 1934, when he is 28 years old. Reynolds has no official connection with the Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Mrs. Reynolds, a petite, dark-haired girl, is a member of the Winston-Salem Junior League. She was educated at Sweetbriar College, Sweetbriar, Va.

Reynolds attended Woodberry Forest School, near Orange, Va., and North Carolina State College. Like his brother, Smith, he has been intensely interested in aviation, and at one time owned Roosevelt Field, near New York.

BULLET-RIDDLED BODY IS FOUND NEAR DISTRICT LINE BY HIKERS

No Cash in Pockets.

The dead man also tallies generally with the description of a bandit who participated in a recent holdup in Annapolis, and police worked along this line also in their effort to trace the slayers.

Nattily garbed, the man had no money in his pockets. He wore a reversible raincoat, brown suit, black shoes and white shirt. Weighing about 150 pounds, he was of average stature and had black, bushy hair.

The boys who found the body were Andrew Willoughby, 8, and his two brothers, of 439 N street southwest, and William Reidy, 12, of 455 N street southwest. They first notified a farmer who passed by, but he glanced at the corpse and said "Oh, he's drunk," and continued on his way.

Then the lads touched the hand of the man, who was lying face downward. It was cold and stiff. Then they ran to notify the police. Sergt. Guy L. Jones, of the county police, was among the first to arrive.

Taken to Rockville.

The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of Warner E. Pumphrey in Rockville. State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, away on a trip, arrived last night and took charge of the investigation. Theodore E. Vollten, identification expert, joined the Montgomery County investigators.

Washington investigators, following several lines of inquiry, saw a possibility that the murder of Lelli could be linked to the fatal shooting on October 28 of Elmer Bleinberger, Baltimore racketeer, after a purported hijacking encounter near the Maryland city.

Drug Ring Blamed.

After considerable investigation, Baltimore police laid the killing of Bleinberger, who died at Emergency Hospital here, where he was rushed by mysterious companions, at the door of a Washington narcotic ring. The local ring, the Baltimore police said, had been duped by the Baltimore group by the substitution of a quantity of novocaine for cocaine in a drug deal. The Bleinberger killing was said to be in revenge for the narcotic swindle. After Bleinberger's death, Baltimore police said, one gangster there died of fright, and this was believed to have some connection with the narcotic feud.

The race slips led detectives to a theory that the slaying was the result of a crooked payoff by the dead man to some one he acted as agent for.

The Jones Mill road is a rough, dirt thoroughfare, which begins at the East and West highway and winds northeasterly over somewhat desolate terrain to the National Park Seminary at Forest Glen. It is often used by saddle enthusiasts of Chevy Chase and Washington as a bridle trail.

WIDESPREAD REVOLT ON TAX BARED BY HOOVER COMMITTEE

both State and national, is credited with having distorted out of all true proportion the increase in criminality throughout the Nation. Crime statistics show larger totals recently, not so much because there are more criminals by the old standards, but because during the last decade scores of acts have become legal offenses for the first time in our national history.

Increase in Crime Cited.

"The passage of the Volstead act precipated a series of developments which have had direct effects in the field of crime," this section continues. "The demand for liquor made a situation in which the violation of a law which had only partial public support rewarded the purveyors of the contraband on a grand scale. Naturally, those criminal elements in the community which had successfully conducted the business of gambling and prosititution were in a position of technical advantage relative to the machinery for law enforcement in this new situation, and into their hands fell a large share of this business, especially in the metropolitan areas.

"In Chicago, for example, they were able as never before to purchase immunity from interference by police and courts; to influence elections and to maintain an entente cordiale with public officials. * * * Under the sheltering wings of the illicit liquor business professional criminals of all types are protected. The gang, an old institution in our cities, has been knitted into this bootlegger-criminal fabric as an integral part of its social, professional and business organization."

Development of Religion.

The continued development of organized religion is hailed as one of the most encouraging aspects of America's social and political stability today.

"In the last twenty years," the report says on this point, "the organized religious agencies of the United States have experienced decided material expansion both at home and abroad, even though in ideas and beliefs the period has been one of extreme unrest. During the period religious bodies have made far more impressive gains in wealth than in membership. Until very recently, membership has increased throughout the country at approximately the same rate as the population, but there have been striking differences in this respect from denomination to denomination."

Increases have been most marked in some instances in the membership of the so-called nontraditional sects, or those which do not claim continuing history from antiquity.

The section on economic development emphasizes the tremendous increase in American industrial productivity during the last quarter-century, but challenges the technocrats on the argument that this tendency defeats the true end of economic well being. For the entire period, new services and new commodities have more than absorbed the man-power displaced by the machine.

The thoroughness of the entire compilation is suggested by the fact that the economic section reports the number of different brands of food products and household gadgets on the retail market today. As of a period late in 1930 there were 87 different brands of package breakfast food available to the American housewives, 101 brands of package coffee, 256 kinds of toothbrushes, 110 types of electric washing machines, 164 styles of fountain pens, 93 brands of package butter and 77 brands of kitchen cleansing powders and water-softeners. There were 38 brands of mayonnaise dressing and 21 brands of soda crackers.

Many Hosiery Items.

One of the country's largest manufacturers of women's hosiery carries in stock no less han 6,006 items of size, color and style. Ten years ago the same firm carried only 480 items in stock.

The section of law and legal development dwells at length on the growing demand for some change in the national policy regarding the administration of the antitrust laws.

"It may be expected that the entire subject soon will be critically reexamined and many basic legislative changes made, not necessarily in the direction of laissez faire but toward adjustment of the law in the light of exigencies and requirements of particular industries," this section concludes.

Hoover Points Out Value Of Committee's Report

(Associated Press.)

The significance and value of the report of his research committee on social trends was touched upon last night by President Hoover in a statement issued through the White House.

The statement supplemented a foreword for the report issued by the committee in New York, and said:

"I wish to add to the foregoing the observation that the significance of this report lies primarily first, in the fact that it is a cooperative effort on a very broad scale to project into the field of social thought the scientific mood and the scientific method as correctives to undiscriminating emotional approach and to insecure factual basis in seeking for constructive remedies of great social problems. The second significance of the undertaking is that, so far as I can learn, it is the first attempt ever made to study simultaneously all of the fundamental social facts which underlie all our social problems. Much ineffective thinking and many impracticable proposals of remedy have in the past been due to unfamiliarity with facts in fields related to that in which a given problem lies. The effort here has been to relate all the facts and present them under a common standard of measurement.

"I regard these aspects of the report as of far greater significance and value than any of its details, admirable though these studies are."

PRESIDENT ATTENDS PALM BEACH CHAPEL

Hoover Party Scheduled to Arrive in Capital by Train Tomorrow.

The Sailfish Club, Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Coming ashore for the first time after a full week of cruising and fishing, the President and Mrs. Hoover today attended services in the flower-banked Royal Poinciana Chapel of Palm Beach before enjoying an afternoon and evening of rest aboard the U. S. S. Sequoia at anchor here.

The presidential party originally had planned a full day of cruising in nearby inland waterways before returning northward by train tomorrow. Plans were altered at the last minute, however, and finally the cruise was canceled because of bad weather.

Mercury Drops Suddenly.

A sudden drop in temperature last night continued today, accompanied by a cold rain, and both the Chief Executive and First Lady were bundled in coats when they came ashore.

So unheralded were the plans of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover to attend church services here—a regular custom for them when in Washington—that few in the chapel were aware of their coming until they, with Dr. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, and a group of Secret Service men, took seats six rows from the front of the roomy white wooden church.

They faced a pulpit banked more than 6 feet deep in semitropical flowers. A lighted Christmas tree at one side gave contrasting evidence of the yuletide celebration. Willum Edward Biederwolf, ministering in the nonsectarian chapel, mentioned the President and Mrs. Hoover and their guests in the course of the services.

President in Fine Fettle.

The Hoovers drove to the chapel in an automobile furnished by John Shepard, of Lenox, Mass., and Palm Beach honorary mayor here, and returned to the Sailfish Club in a car loaned them by Frank Shaugnessey, of Jackson, Miss.

The President appeared rested and happy as he walked down the wharf to take a small boat out to the Sequoia. He stopped at the pierhead to shake hands and chat with more than half a dozen children. The youngsters walked about for half an hour relating his conversation with them and recalling that he had wished a "Happy New Year."

The presidential party plans to leave the Sequoia early tomorrow morning for an automobile drive to West Palm Beach, where a train will be waiting to take them back to the National Capital. Arrival there is scheduled Tuesday morning.

FLYING BOAT HUNTED AT SEA BY CUTTERS

sinking, Coast Guard headquarters here said shortly before midnight that radio communication has become very faint.

The first rescue ship was expected to reach the scene about 1 a. m.

Two of the cutters speeding to the rescue were from President Hoover's fishing flotilla, now docked at Palm Beach. Another was from the Fernandina Coast Guard base, two were in district base here, and another came from the Miami area.

The Arcturus, one of two flying boats recently assigned by the Coast Guard to the Miami area to aid distressed shipping, was reported to have crashed when it attempted to pick up a drifting buoy.

Commander Norman B. Hall, in charge of Coast Guard aviation, announced last night that the Acrux, a twin-engined flying boat, had been dispatched from Cape May, N. J., in a night flight to Florida to assist in the search for the flying boat Arcturus.

According to Associated Press dispatches from Florida, the Arcturus came down beside a small skiff which had been carried to sea with a passenger. The passenger was removed safely to the Arcturus, but the big flying boat was unable to get off the water. The exact nature of the damage has not been learned and efforts to locate her and bring her to port have so far failed.

Lieut. Comdr. C. C. Von Paulsen is in charge of the missing ship. Lieut. W. L. Foley is copilot and the crew of three includes two machinists and a radio man. One of the machinists, a man named Orndorf, is from Washington.

The missing plane is believed to be down 10 miles south of Bethel Shoals between Jupiter and Hillsboro, Fla., and Coast Guard officials at Fort Lauderdale sent out an S O S call asking all vessels to search for the craft.

"They may have taken to the rubber lifeboats," said the Coast Guard's broadcast. "Please keep a close lookout."

The Coast Guard plane Acamar from Miami left yesterday for the scene and officials expressed hope that it would find the plane during the night, especially should some radio calls come through. Other Coast Guard boats in Florida waters, including the Sequoia, on which President Hoover took a vacation cruise last week, joined in the search.

Commander Hall last night expressed confidence that all the men on board the missing flying boat were in no immediate danger. The Arcturus is built to land and take off in rough seas. "Whatever the nature of the accident may be the men have at their disposal every safety device to aid them," he said.

He added it was highly possible that the Acrux, dispatched from Cape May, may be the ship which would locate the Arcturus as it will be in Florida at daybreak today and can cruise out to sea at a speed in excess of 100 miles an hour attempting to raise calls from the missing ship's radio.

The Arcturus is the second of the Coast Guard's new fleet of twin-engined flying boats designed to fly to sea and to aid in marine accidents and for patrol work. The first of these ships was delivered to the Coast Guard here last May.

The Acrux is under command of Lieut. E. F. Stone, of the Coast Guard, co-pilot of the Navy boat NC-4 on its transoceanic flight in 1920. At 11:15 she had passed Cape Henry, Va., according to local Coast Guard headquarters.

Roosevelt Lauds Island Economy.

Manila (Monday), Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Gov. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., today praised the cooperative spirit with which the insular government has reduced expenses to meet a 40 per cent reduction the past year in insular revenues.

NICARAGUA CONTROL TAKEN BY SACASA

President Is Inaugurated as Last of Marines Are Withdrawn.

(United Press.)

President Hoover sent this telegram yesterday to Juan B. Sacasa, new President of Nicaragua: "On the occasion of your excellency's inauguration as President of Nicaragua my warmest good wishes for a very successful administration." Secretary of State Stimson also felicitated Sacasa and also sent a telegram to Jose Maria Moncada, retiring president.

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The last of the United States Marines who for 19 years have been a steadying influence in Nicaragua's earthquakes, fires, floods, and revolutions, were today saying their final farewells.

While President Juan B. Sacasa was being inaugurated president of the largest Central American republic and a guard of about 2,500 American-trained Nicaraguan guardsmen were preparing to assume the task of policing the nation, the American Marines were leaving, or getting ready to depart, for home.

The United States Aviation Squadron commenced evacuation. The first flight of five observation planes and two transport planes under the command of Lieut. Boyden left at 7:50 a. m. (Eastern standard time), for Brownsville, Tex.

Other Groups Leaving.

They were scheduled to spend the night in Guatemala and to reach Minatitlan, Mexico, tomorrow. (Their route was that of the Pan-American Airways).

Four Loening and one Sikorski amphibians, under Flight Commander Capt. Major, left at 7:45 a. m. (Eastern standard time) for Miami, Fla. Their schedule called for a stop tonight at Belize, British Honduras, and arrival at Havana, Cuba, Monday.

Another contingent under Capt. Mulcahy will leave tomorrow for Brownsville. Nine observation planes and one transport plane will depart Tuesday, flying over the route of Lieut. Boyden's group.

The contingents of Lieut. Boyden, Capt. Major, and Capt. Mulcahy each had one ship equipped with radio.

Dr. Sacasa and Dr. Rodolfo Espinoza, former minister to the United States and former minister of foreign affairs, were inaugurated president and vice president with colorful ceremonies. A great influx of citizens from all parts of the nation thronged the capital and joined in the parade through the arched streets.

The officials took their oaths and were inducted into office at the parade grounds at the foot of Loma Hill in the presence of the entire congress, the diplomatic and consular corps, and special envoys from the Pope and the government of Panama.

Gen. Jose Moncada delivered a farewell message to a joint session of congress and then gave the ribbon and insignia of the office to the new president. President Sacasa and his family moved into the presidential mansion at the summit of Loma Hill on the outskirts of Managua today.

Marine Equipment Sold.

All governmental activities henceforth will center at Campo de Marte after the evacuation of the marines.

The marines have sold to the Nicaraguan government all their buildings, including spacious office structures, a mess hall, kitchen, bakeshop and hospital, and medical equipment, tennis and basket ball courts, their well-laid-out parade ground, a golf course and an efficient telephone system.

Headquarters of the aviation squadron also have been taken over. This will save the government about $3,800 monthly in rental of public buildings, which amount has been paid since an earthquake destroyed the city in March, 1931.

The government has contracted with an airways company to manage and maintain the aviation field, which now is a national airport.

Early tomorrow the rest of the marines, 480 officers and men, will be evacuated. They will leave on the first train for Corinto, where they will board the U. S. S. Henderson and the U. S. S. Anteries. Gen. Berkeley will be in charge of one contingent and Col. Hunt will command the unit that will board the Anteries. The Henderson will sail for Quantico and is scheduled for a five-day sojourn at the Canal Zone, arriving at Quantico about January 14.

The Anteries will sail for San Diego, Calif., where it is due to arrive about January 7.

The rumor was current here that sixteen marines have married Nicaraguan girls and will take their brides home with them.

The Marine Officers Club, when it was closed recently, showed a profit of $5,500, of which 50 per cent will be given to the marine hospitals in the United States, with the rest being apportioned equally for Nicaraguan charities and to the Quantico golf course.

President's Address.

Profits of the marine post exchanges in the last six months totaled $32,000. This sum was devoted to amusement centers for the marines and for Nicaraguans and a part of it bought 1,000 Christmas presents for Nicaraguan children.

In his address, President Sacasa gave his thanks to the supervision of the Marines over the election. This enabled Nicaraguans to vote as they pleased, the president said.

"Two major problems are before the government," he continued. "First, the disturbed conditions in the northern departments and second the withdrawal of the United States Marines.

"I will devote all the persuasion that is compatible with national dignity to a return to the guarantees of life and property. I shall leave no stone unturned to bring that about, although it may be necessary to continue to used armed force."

President Sacasa made no mention of Gen. Sandino's name in the address.

"The departure of the United States Marines imposes a sacred duty on the entire citizenry to cooperate with the government to bring about peace. After tomorrow Nicaragua will be without the Marines and the country again assume complete sovereignty.

"I intend to maintain the National Guard free from political activities. I am disposed toward encouraging private initiative and establishing new industries, the building up of means of communication to alleviate the economic crisis, and to encourage closer relationship with Central American republics.

"The government intends to follow paths of tolerance with regard to religion. When my period of government terminates, I hope to prize the conviction on the part of citizens that I did not omit anything which would add to the aggrandizement of Nicaragua."

'Dapper Don Collins' Held In Stabbing of Detective

Notorious Broadway Character Says He Was Injured Trying to Help Officer in Night Club Fight; Taken With Four Others After Melee.

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Charles E. Cromwell, whose Broadway sobriquet of "Dapper Don Collins" is notorious to the police of two nations, came once more under the scrutiny of the law today with a slashed arm and a strange story of having tried to help a detective.

This time the former convict, whose record bristles with escapades involving charges of blackmail, rum smuggling, petty and grand larceny, confidence games and attacks on women who wore valuable jewels in smart cabarets, was charged with four other men with having assaulted a detective during a stabbing in a night life resort.

Louis Raskin, the detective, stabbed in the chest and in the back, was taken to a hospital in a critical condition. Carey Phelan, a former pugilist and manager of the resort, was stabbed in the back.

Raskin said he had completed his tour of duty and was on his way home with his wife when they passed the place. A man ran out of it shouting that there was a fight inside.

Leaving his wife outside, Raskin went into the place and announced his identity. He said someone stepped up behind him and stabbed him in the back. When he turned around, he said, the assailant knifed him again in the chest. The detective said several others pounced on him when he tried to draw his revolver.

As he lay on the floor near the door, Raskin said he ordered those in the place not to leave. Two or three men escaped and the police were notified.

Upon their arrival, the police placed the five remaining men under arrest. The others arrested with Collins described themselves as William Epstein, 30, Max Parkin, 31, Marcel Poffo, 33, and Joseph Minsky, 40, all of the Bronx. Police said that Poffo wielded the knife.

They were taken to the hospital where, police said, Raskin identified Collins as one of the men who held his hands when he tried to draw his revolver. Collins denied this.

"When he said he was a detective," Collins said, "I went to his assistance. That's how I was cut. Phelan also went to his aid, and that's how he was hurt."

The defendants were arraigned before Magistrate Adolph Stern, who ordered all but Minsky held without bail after hearing they had long police records. Minsky had no police record and bail was set in his case at $5,000.

Collins asked that no bail be set in his case, saying that he had no chance of raising bail money. All will be given a hearing on Wednesday.

"Dapper Don's" name bobbed up in 1922 in connection with the murder of William Desmond Taylor, movie director. Later he was arrested in Paris in connection with the shooting of John N. Reid, silk manufacturer, in the Bronx apartment of Hazel D. Warner in 1921.

Nothing ever was proved against him in connection with these or many other cases in which he was arrested. But there were three convictions, one carrying with it a sentence of two years in Atlanta Penitentiary for impersonating a Federal officer.

At the arraignment of the five men, detectives revealed that another man, Martin Panzer, had been wounded in the fight. He was a patron in the resort at the time of the melee and suffered a stab wound on the left forearm.

MANCHUKUO TO PAY ALIEN WAR CLAIMS

Large Proportion Is Held by American Firms; Goods Sent to Chang.

Changchun, Manchuria, Jan. 1 (A.P.)—The Manchukuo government has announced it will pay foreign claims aggregating about $3,000,000 against the former Manchurian regime of Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang in installments covering twenty years.

These claims number 1,100, of which a large proportion are held by American firms, British, Japanese, German, Norwegian, Swedish, Dutch and Czechoslovakian firms also hold some claims. Goods furnished for the use of Marshal Chang's war machine, especially his huge arsenal at Mukden, explain many of the accounts.

The Chang Hsiao-Liang regime was ejected from Manchuria by the Japanese army in 1931 and 1932, and the present Changchun government was created under the protection of Japanese military forces.

Kiichi Sakatani, Japanese chairman of the Manchukuo commission for liquidation of claims, announced claims for goods delivered after January 1, 1930, would be settled in cash before June 30, 1934.

Claims for goods supplied in 1930 and 1931 will be paid by 3 per cent twenty-year bonds.

The remaining claims for materials delivered before the end of 1929 or for damages on unfulfilled contracts, will "be reasonably decided after careful investigation and paid" in bonds of the same kind.

"Both domestic and foreign creditors, regardless of their nationality, will be treated impartially," Mr. Sakatani declared.

LAST OF MARINES LEAVE NICARAGUA

a plan for insuring the nonpolitical character of that organization."

The report concluded with the promise that the United States "desires for Nicaragua, as for her sister republics in Central America, peace, tranquillity, well-being, and the just pride that comes from unimpaired integrity."

Marines were first landed in Nicaragua in 1912, the detachment of about 100 being used to guard the United States Legation. They remained thirteen years, being recalled in 1925.

In 1926, after the inauguration of President Chamorro, virtual civil war developed in the Central American republic, with Bluefields and a number of coast cities being seized by the rebels.

American marines were sent back then under the special relationship now ending to train the native guard and supervise the elections.

Secretary Adams yesterday sent New Year's greetings to the American forces who have finished their service in the General American republic.

Praise From Adams.

"Upon withdrawal of the Navy and Marine Corps personnel from Nicaragua," the message said, "I wish to express to them and to the naval service my sincere appreciation of the commendable manner in which the personnel employed there have performed their important and hazardous duties.

"That service has required ability, courage, determination, discretion and hard work. The record has been excellent throughout and reflects great credit upon the Marine Corps and the whole naval service.

"It is my desire that this message be published to those who have served in Nicaragua with the brigade or with the Guardia Nacional and to the personnel who have served in detachments landing in Nicaragua from vessels of the Navy since 1926."

SUGAR VESSEL SAFE AT RICHMOND DOCKS

City Dreams of Future Port as Foreign Ship Wins Tilt With James.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The British Jack flew at the Richmond docks today from the first foreign vessel to dock here in 33 years, and hundreds of Richmonders turned out to visit the Baron Elibank.

The craft brought to Richmond a cargo of 500,000 pounds of refined Cuban sugar. A third of the original cargo was unloaded at Charleston, S. C.

Officers and crew of the vessel, surprised at the welcome given them, escorted visitors over the craft. Officers said that the Baron Elibank, which has a registered tonnage of 3,700, and is 303 feet overall, with a 50-foot beam, found the James River channel a tortuous one. The craft, which draws 16 feet of water, once struck botton, but pushed off before any damage had been done.

After discharging her cargo here, the Baron Elibank will drop down the river Friday to take on coal at Newport News.

The sugar cargo, the first of several planned by water to Richmond, will be stored here for the importers, the Hershey Corporation.

Business leaders who have been active in advocacy of a deep water channel to Richmond said they believed Richmond may be developed into a seaport of considerable magnitude.

LAXITY IN ENFORCING MANN ACT FORESEEN

Court Ruling in McGurn Case in Chicago Massacre May Alter Policy.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

"Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, of Chicago, and his beautiful "blonde alibi" inadvertently are responsible for a ruling by the Attorney General which probably will alter the Government's policy of enforcing the Mann "white slave" act.

It was learned yesterday that Attorney General Mitchell has instructed all United States attorneys "to give careful consideration to all white slave cases" before they bring indictments.

Mitchell based his order on a recent Supreme Court decision in the case of McGurn and the blue-eyed blonde whose presence with him in a Chicago hotel saved him from prosecution on charges of being one of the men who perpetrated Chicago's St. Valentine's Day massacre. The Supreme Court held:

"A woman by consenting to go and voluntarily going from one State to another with a man with a view to immoral relations with him, does not violate the conspiracy statute, and that in such case the man can not be guilty of conspiracy unless he conspires with some person other than the woman."

The "blonde alibi" Louise Rolph, now Louise Rolph Gebardi, one of the prettiest women in Chicago's underworld, testified she was in the room of McGurn, alias Jack Gebardi, when a machine gunner was spraying an arc of lead into the bodies of seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters on St. Valentine's Day, 1927. She testified "Machine Gun Jack" was with her.

Police said the arc of lead which mowed down the seven gangsters in a Chicago garage was typical of the McGurn method. All were shot in the back while they held their hands in the air.

After the St. Valentine's Day massacre, McGurn and his "blonde alibi" were arrested for alleged conspiracy to violate the white slave act.

Mitchell's instruction probably will result in more lax enforcement of the Mann act.

After the St. Valentine's Day crime "Machine Gun Jack" and his "blonde alibi" were married.

DEADLOCK REACHED IN M'COIN MYSTERY

Police Unable to Determine Whether Legislator Is Alive or Dead.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—An impasse apparently had been reached today by police investigating the mysterious disappearance of R. S. McCoin, Henderson, N. C., attorney, despite numerous reports that he had been seen alive in Ohio.

Authorities still sought traces of a man, identified from photographs as the former North Carolina State senator, who attempted to borrow $10 from J. M. McKinley, a Harrisburg, Ohio, banker, Thursday. McKinley said the man was accompanied by a woman and was driving a new automobile.

Likewise, nothing tangible developed from efforts to find a man, also identified as McCoin, who tried to pawn a watch and overcoat in Mount Sterling the same day.

Strengthening the theory McCoin was slain was an analysis of stains found in McCoin's automobile, discovered in a Columbus garage. Dr. James Beer reported the stains were made by human blood.

Finding of McCoin's automobile followed receipt of an anonymous letter by North Carolina officials, saying that the Henderson attorney had been slain in Virginia and his car driven to Columbus.

Henderson, N. C., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A. F. Holden, 33, who was held for questioning here yesterday in the disappearance of R. S. McCoin, Henderson attorney, missing since December 22, was still in the county jail tonight, held by Sheriff J. E. Hamlett, pending developments.

The results of fingerprints taken yesterday are awaited. E. E. Honeycutt, warden of State's prison, who examined Holden, said he served a prison term some years ago for theft of an automobile.

Officers, however, apparently had little hope of connecting the man with the McCoin mystery.

Flames Destroy Colored Church

Fire Starting in Residence Next Door Spreads to Mt. Sinai Structure.

The Mount Sinai Baptist Church, colored, 1133 New Jersey avenue northwest, was wrecked late yesterday by a fire which broke out in the home of James Perry, colored, 1131 New Jersey avenue northwest.

Passengers on a street car discovered the church in flames and turned in an alarm. Valiant efforts were made by members of the congregation to save fixtures of the church, especially a new Bible, but the structure and all its furnishings were practically ruined.

The fire is said to have started from the furnace in the Perry home. It demolished part of the home and spread quickly through the church. The total loss was estimated at $12,000.

ESCAPED PRISONER SHOT IN GUN BATTLE

Forces California Constable to Act as Chauffeur in Auto Chase.

Newhall, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.). Julius "Junebug" Green, Negro convict, was shot and wounded dangerously in a fight with officers today after escaping from his guard aboard a train and conscripting a constable as chauffeur for flight by motor car.

The captive officer, Truman Hamilton, of Mojave, Calif., who was forced to drive at a furious speed southward with the Negro's two stolen pistols jammed into his ribs, received a slight wound in the back from a richochet bullet.

Physicians said Green, accused in Los Angeles of the murder of an electric railway conductor, had no chance to survive.

Convicted of grand theft three weeks ago at El Centro, Green was taken to Folsom, where he had served a previous term. Los Angeles authorities charged him with the killing of Conductor Elroy Armstrong in a hold-up last October 9 and Deputy Sheriff Henry M. Denison was sent after him.

Placed in an upper berth, Green picked the lock of his leg irons in the night, stole a pistol, a satchel and $80 in currency from Denison, who was asleep in the lower berth, and dropped from the train between Woodford and Bakersfield.

He confronted Constable Hamilton at Mojave at 5 a. m. Hamilton reached for his revolver, but Green got the drop and forced him into the driver's seat of Hamilton's machine.

A boy at Lancaster saw the car dash through, Hamilton driving. Officers began to converge on the route from all points.

Capt. Jesse Stewart and Deputy A. C. Carter, of the sheriff's substation at Newhall, drove north and met the fugitive car. Green fired and his shot was returned. He forced Hamilton to spin the machine about, and a wild chase began, both Green and the officers firing repeatedly.

The fleeing car came to a sudden halt and Hamilton rolled out. The pursuing officers then poured a terrific volley of rifle and pistol bullets into the car. Green was shot through the head and captured.

100 IN PHILADELPHIA SAVED FROM BLAZE

Night Club Entertainer Gives Alarm; Second Big Fire Marks New Year.

Philadelphia, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Philadelphia firemen ushered in the new year by battling two serious fires, in one of which more than 100 persons were made homeless.

Several persons had narrow escapes as flames swept through eight store and apartment buildings at Sixtieth and Market streets today. A night club entertainer, returning home, discovered the fire and ran through the buildings, each three stories high, to arouse occupants. Most of the 100 persons driven from the apartments lost all their possessions.

Thirty firemen and policemen were overcome today when a cloud of choking gas suddenly issued from the ruins of a tallow and hide plant in the Bridesburg section of the city which burned Saturday night.

The firemen and policemen were among those who remained on duty all night at the plant, owned by Jacob Stern & Sons, as tallow, oils and chemicals continued to burn. Nine buildings, covering four acres, were destroyed. Damage was estimated by firemen at $350,000.

John Hurley, 37, a huckster, was burned to death when flames destroyed his house in South Philadelphia today.

LEHMAN WILL TAKE STATE REINS TODAY

Al Smith and Roosevelt to Speak at Ceremony in Albany.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—In the high-roofed Assembly chamber across the hall from the Senate where he made his debut in politics more than 20 years ago, President-elect Roosevelt will officially hand over the governorship of New York State to Herbert H. Lehman at noon tomorrow, while outside in the capitol park 19 guns boom a salute to the new governor.

As scores of Democratic leaders began gathering at Albany tonight, neither the President-elect nor Gov. Lehman was in the capital. Mr. Roosevelt, resting at Hyde Park after his strenuous last day as governor, planned to drive to Albany tomorrow morning. Gov. Lehman, who attended the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Richard M. Limburg, in New York this afternoon, will also arrive here in the forenoon tomorrow.

The death of the governor's sister, which caused Gov. Lehman and Mrs. Lehman to withdraw from participation in the inaugural ball, will bring a note of sorrow into tomorrow's inauguration ceremonies in the gaily decorated chamber where 1,700 persons will watch the new governor publicly inducted into office.

This will be an unprecedented occasion in that it will also be the official State send-off for former Gov. Roosevelt on his way to the Presidency. Surrounded on the inaugural platform by a hundred notables, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, in the role of New York State's elder statesman, will be the first of the three speakers. He will be followed by the President-elect and Gov. Lehman.

Prominent among the group on the platform will be Benjamin N. Cardozo, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court; James A. Farley, national Democratic chairman; John F. Curry, Tammany leader; John H. McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader; Mayor John P O'Brien, of New York City, and U. S. Senators Robert F. Wagner and Royal S. Copeland.

The oath of office will be administered by Judge Irving Lehman, associate judge of the court of appeals, and a brother of the governor, from whom Gov. Lehman took the oath privately in New York yesterday.

ROOSEVELT HOLDS HOPE OF CONGRESS

Democratic Pilots Will Map Legislative Drive at Parley Thursday.

(Associated Press.)

As 1933 began yesterday, Congress looked more and more to the incoming President—Franklin Delano Roosevelt—for guidance in legislative steps that Democratic leaders hope will make the new year an era of better times for the Nation.

Although both branches are set for a drive to enact pending important legislation during the last eight weeks of the short session, the Democratic pilots expect their conference with Mr. Roosevelt in New York Thursday to add impetus to their program.

The question of a special session of the new Congress undoubtedly will be considered at the conference along with the Democrats' program for prohibition repeal, beer legalization, farm relief, economy and taxes. Through economy and taxes the Democrats hope to balance the budget.

To Study Special Session.

With considerable doubt in the minds of the leaders that President Hoover will let the agriculture and beer bills become law, they claim, however, if an extra session is made necessary, they will have the legislation in such good shape that it could be expedited in a special assembly.

Although Roosevelt desires to avoid an extra session soon after March 4 to give his administration an opportunity to familiarize itself with the reins of the Government, the probability of adoption in January of the so-called "lame duck" amendment appears likely.

This would thrust the first regular meeting of the new Congress to January 3, 1934, instead of December 4, 1933, and would make an extra meeting necessary some time before then.

Approval Seems Certain.

Already seventeen States have ratified the amendment. More than forty Legislatures meet this month, and but two-thirds are required to place it into effect October 15. So far, none has rejected it, and the change appears certain to be made effective.

Besides the extraordinary session possibility, the conference to be held at the New York home of Roosevelt will deal with railroad legislation and the general political situation.

Chairman Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce committee is among those to attend, in addition to Speaker Garner, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader, and others.

The interstate commerce committee has approved the Rayburn bill to repeal the recapture clause of the transportation act of 1920, which would relieve the railroads of about $360,000,000 of Government claims against them for excess profits. This bill is pending in the House.

Congress Idle Today.

In addition, some of the discussion probably will revolve around the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's attitude in making loans to hard-pressed carriers.

Neither the Senate nor House will meet today, but during the week the former will consider the Glass banking reform bill and the latter, the Jones farm relief measure encompassing the domestic allotment plan to aid agriculturists. The farm bill will be taken up after the $33,000,000 first deficiency appropriation bill is disposed of.

MRS. J. W. HERRON DIES.

Mother of Washington Newspaper Official Expires in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Mrs. J. Whitley Herron, 74, widow of a former business manager of the Washington Evening Star, died today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James H. Butner.

She also is survived by a son, Col. Leroy W. Herron, advertising manager of the Evening Star.

Mrs. Herron had lived here about four years. She was a native of Orland, Me.

ROOSEVELT WILL GO TO MUSCLE SHOALS

interstate commerce committee are attending the conference has led to the speculation that some levy dealing with interstate shipments is under consideration.

No sooner was he free from the office of governor late last night than the President-elect was giving his thoughts to the titanic task ahead in the organization of a new national Government by March 4.

But this first day of the new year that means so much to him was spent in the absolute seclusion of the Roosevelt home here. He arrived at Hyde Park with Mrs. Roosevelt from Albany at 1 o'clock this morning by automobile. Asleep in the rear seat, he passed through Hudson as the old year died at midnight.

Yachting Cruise Planned.

Plans that will carry him through the middle of February were announced today by him through Marvin McIntyre, his secretary. They call for continued conferences with congressional leaders, a trip to Warm Springs, Ga., beginning January 19, and finally a yachting cruise in Southern waters on which he will retire completely from public men and the public.

Newspapermen have been asked to refrain from following the yacht, which will probably be one owned by Vincent Astor, distant relative. Mr. Roosevelt is considering sending his own press reports from the yacht. He participated in journalism at Harvard

The President-elect will go to Muscles Shoals on his way to Warm Springs, spending part of Saturday, January 21, at the property. He will go thence to Montgomery, Ala., to have dinner with Gov. B. M. Miller that night, arriving at his Georgia home the following day for a two weeks' visit.

Will Confer Here.

On Friday, January 20, he will confer in Washington with party members of Congress. These conferences will be continued throughout his stay in New York City.

While giving immediate attention to Muscle Shoals and the power issue, it is unlikely that this will be brought forward until the new Congress meets. President Hoover has once vetoed the Norris bill for Government control.

Roosevelt also has invited Senators Black and Bankhead, of Alabama; Senators Hull and McKellar, of Tennessee; Representative Hill, of Alabama, and John McNinch, member of the Federal Power Commission, to accompany him on the inspection of the Muscle Shoals property.

EVIDENCE CONFLICTS IN KIMES MYSTERY

Prison Guards Declare They Slew Enemy of Bandits, but Police Doubt It.

Seminole, Okla., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Conflicting evidence handicapped Seminole County authorities today in their efforts to determine the roles played by Matt and George Kimes, notorious convicts, in the killing of George Noland, escaped convict and reputed enemy of the Kimes brothers.

Two State's prison guards, after telling County Attorney Otis H. Presson they shot Noland to death after being guided to his hideout by the Kimes brothers, had gone back to the penitentiary at McAlester with the convicts. Warden Sam Brown promised to return here with the guards to continue the investigation.

The guards, W. C. Turner and Atwood Thompson, questioned last night by Presson, said they killed Noland after the latter had fired three shots from close range at the guards and the Kimes brothers. Noland's shots went wild, the guards said.

Noland was slain late yesterday in a Seminole dwelling where, officers said, he formerly had lived with Nellie Kimes, 23-year-old sister of the outlaws. A mysterious bullet wound, from which Nellie recently recovered in an Anadarko hospital, allegedly was inflicted by Noland in a quarrel.

Turner and Thompson told Presson, the latter said, that the Kimes brothers, who were on leave from prison to attend the funeral of a sister, were not armed. Witnesses, who saw the group enter the house where the killing occurred, Presson said, declared the two convicts carried weapons.

The guards' account of the killing said they forced the Kimes brothers to walk unarmed to the door of the house, where they had learned Noland was awaiting Nellie for a reconciliation.

"Regulation should give each each form of transportation opportunity to develop its potentialities so long as it does not have unfair advantages over other forms. The chief problems for consideration at the present time are as to the fairness of the conditions under which water transportation and highway transportation are conducted as compared with the conditions which surround or should surround rail transportation."

The committee emphasized, however, that nothing it said should be construed to mean that it favored raising highway and water rates to a level with or above rail rates.

As to water transportation, the committee recommended in part:

That common carriers should adhere to rates filed with and approved by a regulatory body; that such rates should be compensatory; that shippers not listed as common carriers should be compelled to adhere to the same rates; that fixed operating schedules should be set up and maintained.

Recommendations for bus and truck lines included:

That there should be close cooperation between State regulatory bodies and that there should be uniform requirements as to the size of motor units; that busses and trucks, along with registration and gasoline taxes, should pay highway upkeep taxes governed by seating capacity or weight; that the Federal Government should refrain from levying gasoline taxes; that the States enter reciprocal agreements as to foreign commercial vehicles; that a Federal regulatory body be set up to oversee interstate highway transportation, but that it delegate its powers to the State bodies and serve only as a court of last resort; and that, like the water and rail agencies, the bus and truck operators should be certified and file just and reasonable rates.

JOHN A. SHEA, 48, JOURNALIST, DEAD

Newspaperman Was Widely Known in Capital Circles and in Baltimore.

SUNSHINE AND COLD CHECK DIXIE FLOODS

Cumberland, Ouachita and Roanoke Exceptions to General River Fall.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Bright sunshine and subfreezing temperatures today brought relief to a rain-soaked South. Flood conditions, caused by rivers swollen by days of rain, improved generally with Nashville and the Tallahatchie area in Mississippi the only places reporting prospects of higher water tomorrow.

Lower stretches of the rivers were likely to cause minor inundations, as the high water moved nearer the Gulf and the Atlantic, but observers believed the worst was over.

The Cumberland, at Nashville, rose to 36.6 feet and was expected to go 2 or 3 feet above the 40-foot flood stage during the night. The Tennessee began falling at Chattanooga as the crest passed, but down-stream towns were likely to face more high water.

Alabama rivers continued on the down grade, but low temperatures brought a skim of ice to flooded lowlands.

It was bright and mild in Arkansas. Little Rock reported the Arkansas River well below flood stage, but the Ouachita at Arkadelphia was on one of its periodical overflows and rose to 19.4 feet, 7 feet above flood stage.

The Pearl, in Mississippi and Louisiana, was stationary, overflowing at places and drowning some live stock, but otherwise causing little damage.

Jackson, Miss., reported a minimum temperature of 23 and Charlotte, N. C., and Chattanooga, Tenn., had lows of 27, with the rest of the South between these figures.

No flood conditions were reported in Virginia and North Carolina rivers were receding, although the Roanoke River flooded about 3,000 acres at the Caledonia prison farm in Halifax. There was little damage except to winter wheat.

Georgia rivers also were receding. Temperatures started off below freezing, but rose rapidly under a bright sun.

Even Florida was chilly with Jacksonville and Miami overcast and Tampa reported clear but cool.

CITY LOSES IN PAY CUT, SAYS NEWMAN

Summary of Findings Shown in Statement Issued by Secretary.

That the Government pay cut has cost business firms in Washington many millions of dollars is shown in a study of the economic effect of salary reductions through the furloughing of employes made by John R. Newman, secretary of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Mr. Newman's summary of his findings is included in the following statement:

"In many quarters, we hear it said that the District of Columbia is not sharing the depression to the extent of other portions of the country. An investigation of actual conditions, however, will show that the business men of Washington as well as the Government workers themselves are sharing the burden with all sections of the country.

"From a study of one portion of the Government service I found that the pay cut has meant the loss of many millions of dollars in purchasing power for Washington business within one year. This estimate is based on the earnings of one comparatively small group of 2,350 employes.

Group Divided.

"This group may be divided into one of 350 employes and a second of 2,000 employes. Those in the smaller group are at present losing four days' pay through administrative furlough and 2½ days' pay through the legislative furlough. Those in the larger group of 2,000 are losing two days' pay by administrative furlough and 2½ days' pay by legislative furlough.

"Through the operation of these furloughs and the consequent loss of pay, there has been removed from circulation in business channels in this city an average of $66,300 a month, or $795,600, if this condition continues until June 30 next.

"It is an accepted principle that each of these salary dollars has a liquid value of about $7 when released in trade. If this be true, the reduction in the purchasing power of this one group of 2,350 persons is approximately $4,869,000. It is inconceivable that any one could believe for one instant that the withdrawal of this amount of money from circulation is not felt alike by the worker and those with whom he is in the habit of doing business.

Simple Arithmetic.

"Bearing in mind the fact that there are nearly 30 times 2,350 Government employes in Washington, it requires no more than simple arithmetic to show that the loss to local business may be expressed in a staggering figure.

"This loss is felt not only in this city, but must of necessity be reflected to all portions of the country through the various channels of trade, and yet, in the face of the figures I have stated, we hear and read statements that Washington is secure from the depression and Government employes are so well off.

"The all-pervading hysteria of wage cutting continues, but it can be cured only by increasing the purchasing power of the great mass of our people. Until the group of men who are fostering wage-cutting propaganda realize this truth and lend their efforts to maintaining an American standard of living, just so long will the depression last."

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

JUST 62 days till inauguration of the "new deal." We can hardly wait to toll the days. The "new deal!" What a mystic pair of monosyllables, mystic enough to win an election. Mystic enough for Government employes to write back home to the folks and tell them that at last they found a Moses to lead them out.

RILEY.

Remember that editorial The Post printed some three weeks ago, pointing out to Congress that the first thing needed was to trim around the corners and the edges before slashing into the heart of Federal pay rolls? Any one can whack a pay roll. There's no art or mechanics in leveling a horizontal cut. The knack comes in eliminating waste and unnecessary costs.

Many Government workers believe that if Congress hasn't put in some plain and fancy slashing of the already low pay level for civil service ranks that Mr. Roosevelt will display leadership, through study, to retain Federal salaries and continue at least that portion of the Nation's remaining buying power.

A—is for "all right, just go ahead."

N—nearly time when F. D. takes the lead.

E—earnest thinkers say he'll do the job right.

W—we won't need men who just'll sit tight.

D—during his four years let's hope he'll do well.

E—Every one gladly should shoulder the wheel.

A—all Federal workers'll still do their best.

L—leave pay rolls alone; this is no jest.

Now for the first time the Federal Diary has obtained exclusively the first picture of the "new deal." Gene Elderman, Washington Post artist, caught the "new deal" pose and what a hand! We wouldn't be surprised if the Literary Digest will recognize Gene's handiwork again.

Last time we left Mr. Fedd, Esq., wondering, yet smiling, as his chauffeur reached into his cab "with all his French vigor, every bit of it, and ordered Swarmi out of his cab, bag and baggage (luggage, to us).

What had Swarmi Fedd done? There was his note. It spoke for itself. Ah, that was just it. It spoke for itself. It spoke volumes and, speaking, left Swarmi too full for words.

A swing from the chauffeur's right and Swarmi ran down the street, after retrieving the note from the chauffeur's grasp. It was enough for one day, even with the loss of his belongings, including his other collar button. But—

M. Z. Gruenberg, Land Section, asks for information on the item appearing in In-Com-Co., I. C. C. employes' publication, regarding chess news. Mr. Gruenberg, the idea is that The Federal Diary invites receipt of news on chess among Federal workers. Let's get together.

Well, well! Haven't seen you since last year.

Harlan H. Zodther, Fred A. Greeley and L. B. Aldrich, assistant director, Astrophysical Observatory, have been preparing the Roebling Expedition to Mount St. Katherine, in the Sinai Peninsula in Egypt. It is expected the Smithsonian expedition will sail in January to undertake measurement of the radiation of the sun, in cooperation with stations in California and Chile, for a period of three years.

"Here's your story," writes "Joseph." "Our expert traffic directors have become expert in securing low numbers for their friends. High price officials for low jobs. This is becoming a racket in this man's town. Santa Claus was sure good to the higher-ups, including the 'Dear young lady' in this bureau. Isn't it about time that this small-time racket was abolished?"

W. F. McDonald, president, Weather Bureau Lodge, No. 23, A. F. G. E., thought he was escaping the snow recently when he rolled down to Macon, Ga. But Old Man Winter grinned, brushed off the snow as "Mc" departed and grunted, "Happy New Year, 'Mc.' Here, I leave just as you thought you were getting away from me."

Director J. Edgar Hoover is expected to be at Bolling Field Tuesday night to see his Bureau of Investigation basket ball boys open the Government League in their game against Crop Production Team, Department of Agriculture. Hoover's champions will take the floor at 9 o'clock, an hour after Bolling Field and Union Printers start. Investigation won last year's league trophy presented by Luther C. Steward, president, N. F. F. E., to Mr. Hoover. This year's trophy must be won three times before any one team can claim permanent possession.

Here are two greetings well worth printing. They come from the Department of Justice, addressed to personnel. Says Edward E. Berney, Standardization, "Continue to work with a smile. Then the more work, the happier you will be." From Everett H. Kuebler, Special Inspection, "Loyalty to the positions we hold will make 1933 happier for all."

They're both pieces of good advice to the entire Nation.

Government workers are expected to be well represented in the Winter Championship Contract Bridge Tournament for the Doherty trophy, to start this week in Washington in various clubs and at the Shoreham. George Hill, Bureau of Standards, is one on the committee for qualifying sessions. Finals will be at the Shoreham Saturday at 8 p. m.

If you happened in at Franklin Station, Postoffice Department Building, during the holidays and lost anything you might find it listed here by A. T. Davis, chief clerk:

One book, 1 lot coins and stamps, one ear pendant, one knife, four sums of money, two umbrellas. But you'll have to identify them, of course.

Date worth remembering: Jan. 1, 1913—Parcel post system went into effect.

STAMP collecting throughout the United States is increasing," says Michael L. Eidsness, superintendent of the Division of Stamps.

"Our records show that for the year 1932 more inquiries were received from pupils and students at schools and colleges in the country with reference to the various issues of special and commemorative stamps than ever before, demonstrating beyond doubt that stamp collectors are increasing in numbers by leaps and bounds."

Mr. Eidsness pointed out that there are many reasons for this apparent boom in the philatelic world. He said stamp clubs have been formed in many elementary schools and prizes are awarded for best essays on stamp collecting.

"This has become an educational feature in our institutions of learning," he said.

He called attention to the fact that during 1932 Boy Scout clubs interested themselves in collection of stamps, foreign and domestic, and that emblems are given those who show the most concern in this fad.

"From what I have been able to learn as head of the Stamp Division and in charge of the Philatelic Agency at Washington," said Mr. Eidsness, "I think it is entirely safe to say more than 50,000 new names have been added to the list of philatelists during the year."

"The role of Santa Claus was taken by the correspondence unit, registered accounts section, division of loans and currency, Treasury Department," says E. A. Gladmon, "when gifts were collected and distributed to deserving children on Christmas. Investigation was made and children in the outlying districts who would not be reached by any organization were given some joy through this source. Miss Irene M. Doran took charge of the collecting of these gifts and all were wrapped in the usual Christmas manner. With each package went the real spirit of Christmas and the hope that some little girl would be happy to clasp a doll or some boy would be happy to receive a gift of his very own from Santa."

ROOSEVELT PLEASED AT TALL CEDAR BID

President-Elect and District Commissioner Indorse Session Plans.

President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and Commissioner Luther H. Reichelderfer joined yesterday in indorsement of the thirty-first session of the Supreme Forest of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon, to be held in Washington, May 17 and 18.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is a member of the organization, sent the following letter to Harry M. Littell, the supreme tall cedar:

"Thank you for that splendid letter of congratulation and good will. You may be sure that I appreciate it, coming as it does from my superior officer, as well as from a neighbor.

"Will you, as far as possible, thank my fellow members in the Tall Cedars for me personally? It is my earnest wish that I may always deserve the confidence which you have shown in me.

"I will look forward in pleasurable anticipation to the Supreme Forest convention, to be held in Washington in 1933, and will see you soon; perhaps, however, not until after the first of the year, when I shall again be a private citizen, at least for a little while. Fraternally yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Commissioner Reichelderfer's letter was in the form of an official invitation to the officers and members of the organization. The session here will be featured by parades, pageants and spectacular drills.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

AFTER a long period of concentrated effort and, I am led to believe, great turmoil of the spirit, Director Frank Capra, under the sponsorship of Columbia Pictures, has converted Mrs. Grace Zaring Stone's novel of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" into a pictorially magnificent screen subject.

As a comprehensive exposition of the clashing philosophies of a beautiful young American and the scion of a long line of Mandarins, thrown together by the revolutionary upheavals of a war-torn China, it is, perhaps, not quite so completely successful—which is the equivalent of saying that the screen version of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" is better mass entertainment than it could have been made by a more rigid adherence to the purely psychological import and purpose of the book.

There seems to be a common difficulty in the translation of authentic stories of life in China into terms of the cinema. The Davises, Owen, sr., and Donald, found it expedient in dramatizing Mrs. Pearl S. Buck's "The Good Earth" to reduce a fiction that epitomized the universal story of human life to a simple recital of the love of a slave girl for the poor farmer whom she married. Similarly, I find in refreshing my lagging memory of a novel read many months ago, in constructing the camera drama of "The Bitter Tea," Edward Paramore, the adapter, has seen fit to ignore much of Mrs. Stone's most salient character drawing in order to transpose her study in racial differences and contrasts into a love story between a brilliant young American girl and a powerful war lord, each strangely isolated from his people.

This has occasioned a drastic alteration in the final episode of the story. Instead of leaving General Yen, alone and bewildered, surrounded on the dock by enemy soldiers—from whom he could have escaped by abandoning the ages-old traditions and the pride of his race—the picture sees fit to make him a suicide. This substitution of a species of moral cowardice for the stoic fortitude of a supreme fatalism weakens the character no little, although it probably makes it more easily and more immediately comprehensible to the general run of casual amusement seekers.

When "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" is shown at RKO-Keith's in the near future, new interest will be awakened in an actor who has never been given credit in America for the ability and depth of artistic perception for which he has been acclaimed in his native Scandinavia, in Germany, Russia and others of the countries of Europe in which he had won renown before ever coming to these shores. Nils Asther, by the perfection of his work in the role of the inscrutable General Yen Tso-Chong, cosmopolite, scholar and intellectual "bandit," will prove a revelation.

Barbara Stanwyck, on the other hand, seemed to this fallible observer throughout last Thursday midnight's preview, to be hopelessly miscast as Megan Davis, the college-bred young American of such culture, brilliance and intellectural fire as to arouse both the interest and the subtle and suppressed covetousness of a debonair and discerning despot. Miss Stanwyck, in contrast to Mr. Asther, seems to possess none of these qualities in sufficient measure to meet the requirements of verisimilitude and conviction. This department's first choice for the part would be the poised, cultured and literate Elissa Landi.

The conflict here, it should be understood, is purely one of mind and national background. Never is the story permitted to degenerate into a mere outlet for primitive passions and the lure of sex.

You will, however, find it interesting, mature and at times exciting entertainment—and always a gorgeous spectacle for the eye.

Seldom has there been a cast bristling with so many "names" as that pictured in support of Ruth Chatterton in "Frisco Jenny," at the Earle. Many of them have not been seen in either lights of type since a time almost as remote as the beginning of the story of "Jenny," out on San Francisco's Barbary Coast back in 1906.

How long has it been, for example, since you have seen James Murray, lifted from a doorman's job at the Capitol Theater in New York to become a star of pictures; Hallam Cooley, Pat O'Malley, Helen Jerome Eddy, a featured player even before King Vidor brought her to still higher acclaim in "The Turn In the Road," in which Ben Alexander was the "baby;" Fritzi Ridgeway, Gertrude Astor and Nella Walker?

More currently in the eye of the film-going public are Donald Cook, Louis Calhern, Robert Warwick, Harold Huber, Frank McGlynn, sr., who gained fame on the stage with his "Abraham Lincoln;" J. Carroll Naish, Noel Francis, Robert Emmett Corrigan, Willard Robertson, Master "Buster" Phelps, Burton Churchill, Edwin Maxwell, Harry Holman and Clarence Muse.

Many of these have no more than "bits," to be sure, but a picture would have to try pretty hard to be bad with a roster like that! "Frisco Jenny" tries pretty hard to be good—and, needless to say, succeeds.

It is not often that this column goes overboard for an acrobatic act, but New Year's week at the Earle marks an exception. The Royal Uyenos Troupe of seven Japs—although there is one in the septet who has Anglo-Saxon written all over him—in speed, accuracy and daring out-tumble any group of gymnasts seen on a local stage in goodness knows when. They open the vaudeville bill—or did on Friday—but are good enough to close it, and this is said in no disparagement of the vastly amusing Jesse Block and Eve Sully.

And if you must have an outstanding example of steady growth in local popularity, there is Frank Richardson, on the same bill. Mr. Richardson has made several personal appearances in Washington since he first crashed into the Capital's consciousness as the singer of "Walking With Susie," in the "Fox Movietone Follies." On each appearance his reception has been greater than upon the one immediately preceding, until now he seems to have reached the peak. After all, you can't do any more than stop the show!

By the way, cordial telegraphic greetings from Frank Richardson, Clifford Brooke and numerous others remind me——

NEW CINEMA OFFERINGS

RKO-KEITH'S

"THE ANIMAL KINGDOM"—RKO-Radio picturization of the stage play by Philip Barry, adapted to the screen by Horace Jackson, starring Leslie Howard and Ann Harding, with Myrna Loy, Henry Stephenson, Neil Hamilton, William Gargan, Ilka Chase, Leni Stengel and Donald Dillaway. Directed by E. H. Griffith. Reviewed from midnight preview.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Here is a daring and delightful comedy, deep in human understanding and alive with sparkling dialogue, that will find immediate response in the appreciation of every intelligent and mentally alert amusement-seeker.

It has not been this reviewer's good fortune to have seen the stage version of Philip Barry's divertingly different conception of what might best be done with the triangle formula for domestic drama, but it seems hardly credible that it could have been very much—if any—more sprightly, more pungent or more adultly entertaining than the picture now on view at RKO-Keith's.

Leslie Howard, of course, by long experience in the role of Tom Collier, the young publisher, who thought he was abandoning a wholly agreeable mistress to marry an adorable and ideal wife, only to find that he had abandoned the perfect wife and married a self-centered and mildly nagging mistress, brings it complete and facile authenticity. His is the dominant role and his the dominant performance among a cast that betrays no weakness and strikes no false note.

Ann Harding, as the deserted young artist, who is the perfect complement of the younger Collier's every important interest—and he of hers—does much by the simple sincerity of her portrayal to retrieve a reputation that of late months has been, at least, evanescent, and Myrna Loy, as the vindictive, but patient and subtle shrew, attains new stature as an actress of maturity, poise and finesse. Completing the quartet of artists that must engage the spectator's first and major interest is William Gargan, in the role which he created on the stage of the punch-drunk ex-prize fighter, pal and butler of the young publisher, whom he serves with a devotion that no more than equals his familiarity, under even the most formal circumstances, and the humor his presence inevitably lends every scene in which he participates.

"The Animal Kingdom" is not, literally, a motion picture. There is little motion in it and practically no action, in the usual sense. It is, rather, a skillfully photographed stage play, arrestingly and pithily written and believably and flawlessly acted. It deals frankly with delicate subjects and by the delicacy of its methods causes them to seem less frank than they really are.

This is to say that Mr. Barry has made no conscious effort to deprive his gay little charade of any of the innuendo or suggestion of a play boldly dedicated to the intimate mysteries of sex, but, merely, has devised a treatment at once so original, so clever and so disarmingly natural that whatever objectionable qualities it might otherwise have possessed are so expertly and artistically glossed over as to leave the impression only of brittleness, brilliance and exquisite polish.

Not a member of the cast but contributes to this unique quality of a sophisticated and literate savoir faire. Henry Stephenson, as the elder Collier; Ilka Chase, as a casual friend; Leni Stengel, Donald Dillaway and Neil Hamilton each in turn has his moment in the dazzling sparkle of Mr. Barry's agile persiflage—but Mr. Howard's, Miss Harding's, Mr. Gargan's and Miss Loy's is the greater glory.

Supplementing the feature on this excellent New Year's bill are a Clark and McCullough comedy, "Hocus Focus," in which a photographer's studio, directly over an ex-ray specialists office, provides the setting for much ribald fun; a clever cartoon comedy, "Silvery Moon," and an especially interesting issue of the Pathe News.

But since, as the picture will teach you, you belong to it, "The Animal Kingdom" is what you will want to see!

Fair and Warm Today Is Weather Forecast

Blustery weather of yesterday was merely a prank on the part of the new year, Weather Bureau authorities believe.

Today, the forecast promised, will be fair and warmer, and equally pleasant weather will continue tomorrow, it is believed. The coldest temperature registered yesterday was 20 degrees—in the early hours of the first day of 1933.

Take another look at your Telephone. Mr. Businessman!

Do you know how much business it can bring you?

Do you know how many people there are at the other end of the line who are at this moment reading your advertisements?

Do you keep your telephone door always open? Do you invite your customers to enter by this door?

You can do this by keeping your telephone number constantly before them in your advertising. On your stationery. On your bills.

Tell your customers how welcome they are to come to your store by telephone. Tell them again and again. It will bring results that may surprise you.

In this way your telephone will be worth more to you, for it is one of those things whose value grows with use.

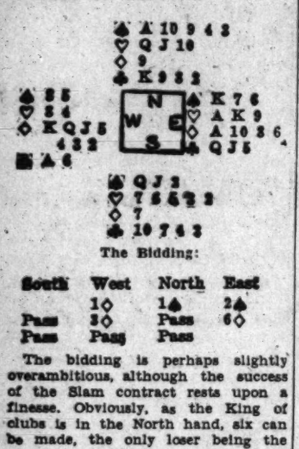
MASTERS OF BRIDGE.

THE mark of an expert is not only in making sound and brilliant bids and playing his cards with meticulous accuracy when accuracy is required, but is just as much in giving his opponents a chance to make a mistake and in capitalizing the mistake immediately if they do by chance fall into an even obvious error.

Mr. Samuel Fry, jr., Assistant Technical Editor of the Bridge World, has been gaining a steadily increasing reputation as an expert Bridge player. His most recent triumph was as a member of the mixed team-of-four in the American Bridge League tournament at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, last month. One hand which helped to win the championship for himself and his teammates was the following:

West—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
	1◇	1♠	2♠
Pass	3◇	Pass	6◇
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is perhaps slightly overambitious, although the success of the Slam contract rests upon a finesse. Obviously, as the King of clubs is in the North hand, six can be made, the only loser being the spade Ace, which is marked in the North hand on the bid.

The Opening lead was a heart, and Mr. Fry cleared the diamonds, then took two rounds of hearts, ruffing the third in his own hand. He then led a small spade, and North made the mistake of not cashing the Ace. The hand still appeared impossible, as the club finesse seemed sure to lose, so Mr. Fry adopted another method of play, which might result successfully if North could be induced to believe that a squeeze was in the making.

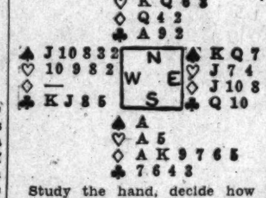
All the diamonds were now played, and North was soon in difficulties for discards. The last three cards in the North hand were the Ace of spades and the King-nine of clubs. Mr. Fry held the club Ace-six and the spade 8. On the eleventh trick he led the spade, which North was forced to win and then concede the last 2 tricks to the Declarer.

It is, of course, apparent that North could have defeated the contract, even after he failed to cash the spade Ace by simply holding a small spade rather than the high one, as thereby the South player would have obtained the lead on the eleventh trick and defeated the end-play. However, the one remote chance of successfully fulfilling the contract was seen by Mr. Fry and utilized in the best possible manner. A Bridge player who fails to capitalize mistakes is not getting all there is in the game.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

South—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

A coat dress which aptly combines the necessary severity and the more stylish looseness, achieved by the square sleeve holes. (Seen on Fifth avenue.)

AS a matter of fact, the majority of women over 30 are actually unable to wear close-fitting garments well. This is really why the "two-thirds" dress was so universally popular for so many seasons—you remember, of course—one-third head and upper figure, one-third skirt and one-third legs? Well, that swathed hip girdle with its blouse above, which covered a multitude of over-30 sins, such as waistline ballast, too much tummie, &c., was a boon to femininity! Since those days it is quite a safe estimate that two-thirds of the women have been envious and uncomfortable, while the minority have flaunted either naturally endowed or relentlessly acquired waistlines and flat tummies and smooth shanks.

These are the reasons why I predict the fuller silhouette. We wimmen are long suffering, but we toin, gemm'lem, we toin! Lots of us have well-rounded figgers, and we like 'em. The sonnet of the slim and slender young girl has its place——and so has she. But slim and slender femininity, as a whole, has never been sung in either praise or poety, remember. And it is simply unfair to create styles exclusively for the slim and slender girl——letting mother and grandmother take it or——take it, since they can't very well leave it.

We've started in the upper story, as it were, with a frank admittance of a bust——even accentuated by all kinds of graceful and clever and form-giving drapes. Now there remains but to allow skirts to gather or pleat or anyhow begin——at the belt, and not at the thigh, to be skirts. Draped and puffed sleeves have been a boon to heavy upper arms as well as to scrawny ones——while the slim and slender girl always has draped bodices and decolletages have more than hinted at the way the wind is going to blow——it remains only for the hip-and-belt movement to get underway——for more flattering styles all around. (No pun intended!)

* * * *

There are lots of pretty scraps in the scrap bag that are big enough to combine with something else to make delightful tea aprons! Even two of his best hankies make an adorable and quite, quite ample one. No need to say you never wear an apron——you would if you had some cute ones, that I promise you. It being all the mode to be domestic you know. So why not send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet, with its numerous designs for delightful tea aprons? If you haven't the time to make 'em yourself, give the leaflet to your dressmaker or maid——the ideas will please them, too.

* * * *

The severity of the coat dress is its one drawback——or was. But now the coat dress, with all its elegance and flattery, has acquired a little softness, without in any way detracting from it. The one I sketched for you today is an example——the square sleeveholes contributing much to this newer softness. And then, there are the most delightful kinds of material available for this type of dress! Try one for late winter and early spring days, why not?

* * * *

Three colors, but not too flashy ones——and you have gloves and belt that would make last year's dress like next spring's! Try it in three shades of leather, the same color——three blues, for instance, or three browns, if you have more use for brown in your wardrobe.

The Beauty Sorceress.

"My child, half a lemon has more surprises in it than Pandora's box! For to rub it anywhere on the body will neutralize perspiration odors; to eat it at night justbefalling asleep will guarantee a sweet breath in the morning; to dilute it with water and use on the hands will both free them from kitchen odors and whiten them."

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

IN THE vorld of business, the beginning of January is inventory time. Stock is taken of all the assets, the saleable items on the shelves counted, the liabilities and losses figured. Then each industry invariably starts off with a clean slate ready for bigger hopes and bigger business the coming year.

So let it be with beauty. Carry forward all the beauty measures you have found helpful in the past. And make up your mind that in the coming year you will be younger and lovlier, in spite of the calendar.

List Your Assets.

What are your beauty assets! Resolve to cultivate them. For instance, if your hair is your best feature, keep it glorious, clean, healthy, rich with high lights, arranged in the style that flatters you most. Or, is your skin free from wrinkles, soft as a baby's and as smooth and clear. Don't let it age one day. Care for it so that people will continue to refer to the rose petal delicacy of your complexion. If your figure is perfectly proportioned, hold on to your present weight and line, don't lose; but, on the other hand, don't gain any unnecessary bulges.

List Your Liabilities.

List the beauty points that you consider below par and would like to remedy. Let me help you.

Your hair. Is it dry and lifeless? Does it break at the ends? Is your scalp tight and dry? Or is your hair oily and your scalp too, and do you feel that you would like to shampoo that oil away every few days? Is your hair hard to manage and arrange properly? Would you like a new hairdressing style?

Your skin. Is it dry? Oily? Wrinkled? Muscles beginning to sag? Marred by pimples or eruptions? Coarsened by large pores?

Your figure. Are you under weight? Over weight? Is your posture right? Or do you slump forward, causing shoulders to become round and abdomen to protrude? Is your weight unevenly distributed; too much upper arm, or too little calf, &c.?

Self Improvement.

By adopting the beauty measures that science has evolved, each and every beauty liability can be overcome. And at the risk of being trite, I must repeat, "Where there's a will, there's a way." If you are serious about it, you can at the end of this year show everything on the asset side, with no liabilities to weigh down the beautiful side of the scale. Write me your problems after you have made definite note of your assets and liabilities, and I shall be happy to help you.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

AFTER EFFECTS OF SCARLET.

IN many diseases the main interest is in the complications and after-effects rather than in the primary disorder. If the primary disease happens to be contagious and the parties involved are good citizens and good neighbors, the interest in preventing an epidemic becomes one of the prime motives.

Illustrations of those diseases that have complications more important than the primary disease are: Growing pains, the complication of which is heart disease; tonsilitis and heart disease; the common cold, pneumonia, influenza, sore throat, mastoid abscess, running ears and deafness; measles and pneumonia; diphtheria and paralysis, particularly paralysis of the heart, threatening sudden death, and scarlet fever and some form of Bright's disease.

As to the last of these, Dr. B. A. Peters offers some methods of protection. He advises that during the attack of scarlet fever sufficient alkalis be given to make the urine alkaline and to keep it so throughout the disease and for a while thereafter. The use of a light diet in which there is an abundance of fruits and fluids, and not much meat, eggs and bread, is in general use. Almost any of the well-known alkalis can be used, but the dose should not be large.

In addition, Dr. Peters advises physicians to give their patients with scarlet fever a mild kind of tincture of iodine and fresh thyroid. Dr. Peters is a Briton and he advises the use of the British mild tincture, which is only one-third the strength of the American tincture. The extract of thyroid, he says, should be kept for fourteen days after the eruption. He warns against using too much, or using it too long, lest kidney hemorrhage result.

These last two procedures are very near the border line between service and disservice, and should not be used by any one except physicians with experience. Keeping the skin warm, protection against chilling, the use of plenty of fluids, of diets that do not strain the kidneys, and a limited use of alkalis lies within the field of household medicine.

There is some reason for thinking there are two sets of poisons produced by the cocci which cause scarlet fever. One of these is supposed to cause the sore throat which is the principal symptom, and the eruption, the most striking symptom. The other is supposed to cause the important complications of scarlet fever when they are present. Those complications are swelling of the glands of the neck, discharge from the ears, and some form of acute Brights.

ENLARGED LIVER.

A reader writes:

1. What causes an enlarged gall bladder and liver?
2. What can cure this?
3. Is it serious?

REPLY.

1. The enlargement of either organ may be primary, that of the other being secondary. Among the causes of large gall bladder are cancer, gallstones, infected gall bladder. Among the causes of enlarged liver are cancer, one form of cirrhosis abscess, yellow fever, malaria, syphilis, leucemia, excess fat, overeating, alcoholism, heart disease, gall bladder infection and many others.

2. Depends on what it is. Many cases are not curable. Some can be cured by taking a purgative and not eating for a few days. There are many treatments where there may be any one of many causes.

3. It may be very serious.

What Today Means

By MARY BLAKE

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:45 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5:10 p. m. and from 7:45 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 10 a. m. and from 2:30 p. m. to 3:45 p. m.

You will feel restricted and "tied-down" on this January 2. You will crave activity of a physical nature. A splendid day for athletics and out-of-door recreation. The late hours of the day, and the evening can be profitably spent in reading and in meditation. A good day for renewing old friendships.

The child born on this January 2 will in all probability have a fitful temper; the slightest provocation will "set him off." Fortunately the child's anger will not be a lingering one, and as he grows older he will gradually gain better control of himself. In school he will do well. Among his school friends he will not be known as a good sport.

Born on January 2, your prime interest in life is how to make more and more money. "To commercialize" your talents is a pass-word with you. Whatever you know, or think, or do, is of interest to you only in so far as you can turn it into cash. Being a very material person, with only one aim or pursuit in life, you are not a very interesting person to know. You do have your following though, among the many who are like-minded. You are a magnetic person, with no little charm. You are decisive, clear-cut and persuasive in your speech. You have much energy, so much so in fact, that you seem to impart it to others. Life to you is a game, the object of which is to roll up a big score in dollars and cents. In spite of many zigzag and "fizzled" plays, you will no doubt carry on to attain your goal.

If you are a woman, born on January 2, you may reckon yourself as among those fortunate people to whom worry is practically unknown. Your simple and easy way through life makes you a thoroughly likable person. You bring calm and peace into the lives of many simply by your presence. You spend a great deal of time in and about your home; you care little for gay social activities. A day spent in caring and planning for your husband and family brings you great happiness.

Successful people born on January 2:

James Wolf, British general.
Charles Parker, manufacturer.
Isaac Everett, clergyman of the Church of Christ.
Justin Winsor, librarian and historian.
Edward S. Martin, journalist and author.
Miss M. Cary Thomas, educator.

Inge for Sun Baths And Eugenic Mates

"Gloomy Dean" Says Unfit Should Be Prevented From Marrying.

London, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Dean Inge of St. Paul's Cathedral, whose comments on life have brought him the title of "The Gloomy Dean," is strong for sun bathing—but not nudism—and thinks churches should support the eugenics movement.

"I have no sympathy with the vagaries of the nudists," he told a health education conference, "but the exposure of the skin to the sun and air is the most valuable part of open-air bathing. The churches have no sympathy with those squeamish town councilors who wish to insist that all persons entering the water should be fully clothed from neck to knee."

As for eugenics: "The church should actively support the eugenics movement and discourage the prejudice which exists against it." A clergyman should legally be allowed to refuse to solemnize a marriage between unfit persons, he said. "The church ought also to condemn that kind of marriage as wrong. If married persons believe that their children are likely to be diseased in body or mind it is right, and not wrong, for them to prevent conception of those children."

SENATOR DILL'S METHOD.

Senator Dill proposes that the Senate judiciary committee shall test out the intoxicating quality of 3.2 per cent beer by calling in volunteers to drink the stuff. He calls these subjects a jury, but in reality the committee would serve as a jury. Presumably the subjects would be required to drink to their full capacity, and their behavior would then enable the jury to determine whether they were intoxicated, partly intoxicated, or merely innocuously saturated.

Assuming that the committee could procure 3.2 per cent beer and dispense it as a beverage without violating the Volstead act, and assuming that the committeemen are qualified to pass judgment upon the subtle effects of varying quantities of alcohol upon different individuals, Senator Dill's proposal seems to possess merit as a new method for ascertaining facts upon which to base enlightened legislation. There is a serious dispute as to the exact amount of the deficit, for example. How can Congress apportion taxation accurately if it does not know how much revenue should be raised to balance the budget? Senator Dill's method would easily solve this difficulty. Let the proper committee count the money in the Treasury and thus ascertain by actual test the amount of the deficit.

The deleterious effects of adulterants in food and drugs have never been accurately ascertained and declared by Congress. No committee of Congress has called in subjects to be tested as to the stupefying effects of opium. The pure food and drugs act seems to be an adventure in ignorance and guesswork instead of a scientific ascertainment of fact. Let Senator Dill's method be adopted, so that Congress shall not hereafter be humiliated by judicial discovery that facts assumed by law are not facts at all, but pure legislative imagination.

CONTROL OF LIQUOR.

Representative Celler offers a comprehensive plan for handling the liquor traffic in the States after the eighteenth amendment has been repealed. With the collaboration of Lewis S. Rosenstiel he has studied the European and Canadian systems and evolved a plan that is designed to prevent the return of the saloon, as it was formerly known, and to encourage temperance without forbidding the sale of liquor. This is one of the most comprehensive plans that has yet been worked out to take the place of prohibition.

In trying to prevent restoration of the old-time saloon Mr. Celler also seeks to abolish the speakeasy. Yet he does not indorse State distribution of liquor because a partnership between government and the liquor business is offensive. His effort is to provide for distribution of liquor under private agencies in a way that will be least obnoxious to the people and that will encourage use of light beverages instead of hard liquor.

To accomplish this he proposes to set up in the States which permit manufacture and sale of intoxicants a non-competitive license system. License boards would be appointed by governors for every county permitting the sale of liquor. These boards would be given absolute control over the granting and revoking of licenses to liquor dispensers. Each board would consist of a clergyman, a lawyer, a physician or chemist, a merchant, an educator, a social service worker and a real estate man or farmer. All persons interested in any way in the liquor business would be disqualified for such service.

These county boards would be authorized to issue beer licenses, under which light beverages might be sold over the bar; hotel, restaurant and tavern licenses, under which liquors might be sold during reasonable hours and under strict regulations; and bottled goods store licenses, under which hard liquors might be purchased in bottles for consumption elsewhere. Licenses of all kinds would be strictly limited in accordance with population and local sentiment. The sale of liquor in quantity would also be forbidden to aid in protection of the dry States. License fees and taxes would be so regulated as to discourage the use of liquors with high alcoholic content and substitute therefor light wines and beer.

Representative Celler's plan may prove to be impractical in some respects and unworkable in others. But it is encouraging to find that some members of Congress are actually struggling with the difficult problems that will be raised when the eighteenth amendment is repealed. These problems can not be solved by the clamor for beer or by a blind demand for repeal. Far-reaching precautions must be taken to prevent the development of conditions far worse than any which have prevailed under prohibition. Mr. Celler has made a notable contribution to the study of liquor control, and he seems to be on the right track.

RAILROAD PROBLEMS.

A searching inquiry into the transportation situation has just been completed by a large and representative committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. An effort was made to discover measures that will bring about a better adjustment of present rivalries between the principal competing forms of transportation—rail, highway and water. From an impartial standpoint the committee endeavored to consider the just development of each interest while considering also the public welfare.

Several months of study of the chaotic condition of transportation led the investigators to recommend the elimination of any unfair advantages and inequitable taxation and the establishment of a system of regulation "which will permit each agency to function to its best advantage in the public interest in accordance with its inherent merits and without special privileges over other forms of transportation in which there is equal public interest."

This means, in brief, that the committee finds that water and highway traffic needs some curbs in order that the basic carrier system of the country, the railroads, shall not be ruined by competition. It is specifically recommended that regulation be extended to cover rates and services of highway and water carriers; that the government withdraw from barge line operation; that motor carriers be assessed a mileage tax and required to pay an equitable contribution to the cost of maintenance and improvement of highways, the mileage tax to vary with capacity, with uniform State regulations as to size, weight and speed limitations for commercial vehicles.

The trouble in the transportation industry, this committee finds, is the same that afflicts all others—oversupply—with the railroads the chief sufferers. Few of them are earning operating expenses and fixed charges. The other forms are suffering from competition among their own units, and many of them are found to favor reasonable regulation. Shippers benefit at times from competition and low rates, but suffer from discrimination and uncertainty in rates and service, and the same demoralization of glutted markets which the committee found existed in 1897 and which brought about legislation for the regulation of the railroads. The situation again demands a revision of regulatory measures, in the opinion of the committee, so that each form of transportation shall be given opportunity to develop its potentialities so long as it does not have unfair advantages over other forms.

GAINING ON TUBERCULOSIS.

Medical science is making notable headway in its fight to curb the ravages of tuberculosis. The last ten years has recorded advances in treatment that are saving thousands of lives. The probability rate of death from tuberculosis, which in 1920 was 6.46 per cent, fell to 5.09 in 1925 and to 4.25 in 1930. This means that whereas 64 persons out of every thousand were destined to die from consumption ten years ago, only 42 were so marked in 1930. Twenty-two persons out of every thousand today escape the fate that would have been theirs a decade ago.

These figures, compiled with care by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., show that while tuberculosis must still be considered a disease which particularly attacks the young, comparative improvement has been made in successful treatment of youthful patients. Among white males the probability of ultimately dying from tuberculosis rises to a maximum at the age of 15. Among white females this maximum is reached at 10. The probability of tubercular fatality at 15 for males is 45 per 1,000, while at 50 it is 25 per 1,000. Only ten years ago these figures were in the proportion of 71 and 36.

While the statistical tables for the colored races have not been segregated except for the last five years, the reports show a much heavier mortality there. The comparison for 1930 reveals the remarkable disparity of more than twice the tubercular toll among colored persons as whites. The probability death rate per thousand is 42.5 for whites and 96.7 for the colored population. This does not mean merely that the death rate from tuberculosis is higher among colored persons, but also that of the deaths among colored persons, a larger proportion is from tuberculosis than among white persons.

SCHOOLS HIT HARD TIMES.

Frequent complaints are heard about the effects of the depression on the schools. Educational budgets have been reduced, building programs have been curtailed, and in many cases teachers have been dismissed because of insufficient funds. At the same time the number of children attending schools has increased. In some communities maintenance of former standards of education has become a formidable problem.

When the schools of the country as a whole are considered, however, it is apparent that they have been disturbed less than most institutions by this period of hard times. The Federal Office of Education has completed a survey of city schools in all parts of the Nation. It finds that the total expenditures of these institutions have declined 5 per cent in the last year. Expenditures for capital outlay have fallen off 38 per cent, teachers' payrolls 5 per cent, and the number of teachers 2 per cent. The assessed valuation of property taxed for school purposes was 7.5 per cen lower. Enrollment increased 1.39 per cent and appropriations from State governments for educational activities was more than 3 per cent higher.

When the decline in teachers' salaries is compared with the drop of wages in general teachers are shown to be in an extremely fortunate position. The same is true with respect to unemployment among teachers. Nor is the decline in the average school budget comparable to the shrinkage of business. Nevertheless, the financial status of the schools is precarious in some localities. In the Western States, for example, school budgets have been trimmed by 15 per cent and enrollment has increased by more than 5 per cent. In the South Central States expenditures for schools have fallen more than 20 per cent, and many of the rural schools are in deplorable condition. In Arkansas 26 schools have been abandoned, and four out of every five counties are compelled to close school terms early because of lack of funds. On the other hand, school budgets in the North Atlantic States remain about the same and teachers' salaries have not been reduced to any appreciable extent.

The present problem is to make available budgets go as far as possible in producing educational results. School budgets can not well be extended when the people are staggering under heavy tax burdens. This is an excellent time for the elimination of all frills in education, and for concentration on fundamentals.

IS THE UNIVERSE DYING?

Prof. Richard C. Tolman's lecture before the American Association for the Advancement of Science offers a new basis for the belief that the universe is not running itself down. He refuses to accept the conclusions of Sir Arthur Eddington and Sir James Jeans that the universe is moving toward ultimate stagnation. It is true, of course, that the cosmic bodies are slowly expending their energy. The laws of thermodynamics have led some scientists to conclude that the energy of the universe must some day be exhausted. But laws of relativity are added to the laws of thermodynamics by Professor Tolman. It is quite possible, he says, to have a universe that is running down, but it is also possible that it is renewing its energy. Gravitation, he says, eternally builds new strength and energy as fast as radiation spends it. One set of forces may set other forces in motion that will counteract the first. He is not ready to accept the theory that the universe is as simple as a top that spins with ever-diminishing momentum.

Laymen who ponder over the workings of the universe will be inclined to accept Professor Tolman's view. Man has an irresistible urge to regard himself as immortal and the universe as eternal. It is not unreasonable to suppose that the same power that created the universe can maintain it.

Whoever devised the scheme of making the early return of beer dependent upon the United States Senate must have been stampeded by the report that this country will be enveloped in ice within 1,576,000,000 years.

The First Cavalry no longer has horses, but that's not strange. The Home Loan banks don't make loans, the Kellogg pact has no teeth, the stock market has no market, the Chaco War is not war, and prohibition doesn't prohibit.

A Britisher suggests that Gov. Roosevelt make a trip to Europe before inauguration in order to educate himself; but he has learned enough about some things already.

"I'm a Tammany man, but I'm going to be mayor," says the new Mayor of New York. His name is John Patrick O'Brien, but he is an American.

The Senate and House will be in order Thursday night in New York.

ART LEAVES AMERICA

From the Boston Transcript.

Twentieth-century economics provides constant surprises. On the heeds of the weird and mystifying pronouncements concerning technocracy comes reminder that the movement of art is an economic barometer. The fine arts may be made the subject of graphs and curves showing the state of business. Along with the movement of gold may be reported the movement of pictures and statues as bearing upon the state of finances public and private.

This aspect of twentieth-century economics contains reminder that it is a topsy-turvey world. No longer is there occasion for sympathy for the English gentleman forced to sell the Tudor fireplace in the ancestral mansion that it may adorn the palace of the pork packer in Chicago. There is no call to waste condolence on the Frenchman of noble lineage compelled to transfer the chateau and its treasures to the movie queen from Hollywood. There is instead opportunity for sympathy of that sort for folks at home.

It has come to pass that a syndicate has been formed in Paris to buy back from Americans the art objects from Europe acquired in a happier day. An emissary of the syndicate is in New York. He says it starts out with a capital of $1,200,000, and more is available if needed. He is quoted as saying further that New York has lost, for the present at least, its hope of being the art center of the world. That distinction now belongs to Paris. Art is moving east across the sea instead of traveling west.

It gets back to the art movement as concerned with the course of trade. Its possibilities as a business barometer may have been overlooked, but they are not new. It is recalled that after the French Revolution and the Franco-Prussian War there were many sales of French pictures abroad. In the present century up to 1929 trade in foreign art was brisk in New York. Pictures were prominent among the imports. Times have changed. Now as gold flows into America art flows out.

In this situation there is obviously material for filling the pages of the Congressional Record. France refuses to pay its installment on the debt. Its people buy pictures in New York. Congressional orators may see in it a new defiance: Millions for the fine arts but not a sou for Uncle Sam. The opportunity will, perhaps, be seized upon in the halls of Congress as too good to be missed.

New Year Resolution, Number One.

POST HASTE.

Washington starts the new year with the handicap of having to recover from six holidays in ten days.

Former Gov. Roosevelt has invited a small New Year party to New York to discuss current questions, or possibly just to tell them.

Will Thursday's extra-official session in New York avoid that extra April session? Anyhow, it will be interesting to see if all the boys recognize their master's voice.

Not that there are any evidences of revolt, other than some curiosity regarding the carnivorous diet of the great, even as in ancient Rome.

It is not necessary to be a business professor, or a Larry Sullivan, to understand that a bigger and better turnover is what is needed for the upturn.

Is Peru's face red, putting her on a Chaco peace committee just as she is precipitating the same thing at Leticia?

Mr. Rankin reads Messrs. Rainey and McDuffie out of the speakership race because they have dared to consider a sales tax. Lese majeste in Congress must be promptly punished.

As the first '33 degree wager we bet that the unofficial Cabinet-makers who will be farthest off are those who are using only the big and obvious timber that is available.

If you make your domestic allotment another slice of bread, emulate Andy with regard to pork chops, smoke another cigar and buy a new shirt, it will be the most effective form of farm relief.

When the limelight grows feeble it is always possible to decline an untendered Cabinet position.

It took some imagination for the business dopesters to demonstrate that everything is going to be on the up-n-up this year without taking any responsibility for the prediction.

It was a sensible New York judge who refused a padlock for the Casino because it provided ginger ale and seltzer setups. Try to get away on the witness stand with what you thought was somebody's intention.

If Congress goes into the relief business let it be class legislation that will aid the needy farmers, veterans, railroad men, factory workers, and also the white cholera sufferers we hear about.

New Year Eve's nog tapered off yesterday with eggnog, and this morning—just eggs, please.

DEPARTED JOYS.

I used to think it joy to skate
And cut a dashing figure eight;
To crack the whip with pals of mine,
Held hand to hand in one great line,
But now to that I don't aspire,
I'd rather sit beside the fire.

Time was I thought it rather nice
To glide across a sheet of ice
And with a maid of wondrous charm
Cut fancy figures arm in arm,
But now when winds blow cold I find
Toward a grate fire I'm inclined.

In days gone by to take a spill
Upon the ice produced a thrill;
To kneel before a maiden's feet
And strap her skates was rapture sweet,
But married to that damsel now,
I'd rather read a book somehow.

I watch the youngsters on their way
To skate upon the frozen bay,
And bright of eye and red of cheek
I think such joy I used to seek,
But I don't envy them their fun,
I know my skating days are done.

Should Men Build for the Public If They Do Not Season Their Lumber?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE chief fault of a republic is that it drifts. It has almost no guidance, except by those with axes to grind, and the people never take charge to avert a wreck until part of the damage is done.

This policy of drifting—of doing nothing—accounts for America's ever-increasing number of youthful criminals.

If you were asked what factor will determine America's future, what would you answer? The tariff? Taxes? Beer? Bonus?

It is none of these. Everything depends on the character of the Nation's citizens. And the character of the citizens who will make America ten and twenty years from now depends wholly on the training given to boys and girls now in their teens.

Russia has shown that boys and girls can be influenced as the nation desires—even to the point of betraying their parents.

There are millions of good American homes in which children are being trained wisely and well—chiefly, of course, by example.

Boys and girls from these homes will become decent men and women.

If all others were destroyed, the future would develop little need of peace officers, courts and prisons.

The criminals and undesirable citizens now in the making are the boys and girls denied proper training.

Which is better and cheaper, to train them now or imprison and electrocute them ten years later?

It is possible to train and save them.

Let the Nation's most competent men devise a scheme and course of training. Let every child be registered at the age of 12. Let those properly trained at home go their way as usual. But let any infraction of law, night prowling, evil companions or vicious habits stand as prima facie evidence that the child is not properly trained at home, and let it then become the care and ward of the State.

Make this the most important of all State projects. Let our ablest men, adequately paid, keep close supervision of youngsters who need it, using pride and shame as tools, promoting their charges to new liberties as they are deserved, restraining and confining the defective and the incorrigible.

Build the right citizens and the Nation will build itself. It costs much more to pull a ship off the rocks than to steer it in safe channels.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Budget Cat Back Again.

Minneapolis Journal.

How to balance the budget continues to be the great Congressional puzzle at Washington. There is, roughly speaking, a prospective difference between the Government's income and outgo of half a billion dollars. Three courses are possible:

First, to let the deficit continue to pile up, on the theory that when prosperity returns, it will soon be extinguished, and that meanwhile it is not wise to burden business with new taxes. To most well informed persons, that way madness lies.

Second, to cut down governmental expenses rigidly. This is obviously sound practice. But it is a course that Congress pursues gingerly and with great distaste. And besides it does not seem humanly possible to save half a billion in Government expenditures without wrecking Government services considered more or less indispensable.

Third, to impose new taxes. But here new difficulties arise. What new taxes can be devised that will yield enough money?

Texas Enigma.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Some legal opinion in Texas has held that our next Vice President can not refuse that which he has yet to assume. If he resigns as Speaker and representative from the Fifteenth Texas District, such a course would not relieve him of his seat in the next Congress. Meanwhile, if he is to delay his resignation until March 4, how is a deserving Texas Democrat to be elected to fill his shoes in the task of getting Government appointments and works for the Fifteenth District immediately the new Congress rises to power? With the threat of a special session, the situation is not without its dangers to the Democracy of his constituency.

A Bill to Veto.

Boston Transcript.

President Hoover should veto the Philippine independence bill. It is significant that both House and Senate adopted the conference report on the bill without a record vote. The standing vote of the House, 171 to 16, seems overwhelming, yet the record vote was dodged partly in the belief that the President would veto the measure, consequently members would be spared the awkwardness of changing their votes in case of a veto. It is to be hoped that they have estimated correctly. Mr. Hoover's own statements, the uncompromising position of Secretary of State Stimson, who has been Governor General of the Philippines, the outspoken warning of Secretary of War Hurley, who had visited and reported on the islands, that "the political chaos in the Orient is such that this is no time to deal with Philippine independence"—all these and other occurrences indicate that President Hoover will regard it as his clear duty to prevent, if he can, the operation of this half-baked measure.

Independence in Sight.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Whatever happens, it may be said that the Philippines are nearer independence today than ever before in history. Developments in this direction during the past two years have been singularly rapid. Independence would mark the end of an era for both the Philippines and the United States. Neither can contemplate the succeeding period with any great satisfaction.

Taxing the Growler.

Philadelphia Bulletin.

New York is thinking of clapping local taxation on beer. No doubt other States and cities will line up to share in the contemplated revenue, and we shall witness a new phase of the old practice of rushing the growler.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader Wants to Know When and How Beer Will Arrive—Too Much Revenue, Too Little Beer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What actually is this "beer" agitation? Is the idea to provide "beer" or to obtain "revenue?"

My ideas on the subject, derived from platforms of the two parties and from the passage of the 4 per cent beer bill by the House of Representatives were that we were to have beer to drink when and where we wanted it. From the date of the passage of that bill I have heard nothing but revenue.

In The Washington Post of December 28 I now find that for the District of Columbia we are to have special legislation permitting beer, but with the main idea of raising revenue prevailing.

It is proposed to tax beer locally a full 50 per cent of the United States tax; to have a license tax of from $25 up, and to limit the sale of beer to "eating places." It is calmly stated that with a tax of $2.50 per barrel, the vendor can sell at a profit when selling an 8-ounce glass for 5 cents.

It seems to me that the original ideas regarding beer have been lost sight of and that, regardless of promises, the entire matter has become one of "beer for revenue only."

Assuming that the average man wants beer, he most certainly does not want his drinking place limited to eating places. When we get right down to facts he wants back the "bar." He wants to stand up at that bar and drink his beer as was his former custom. If such standing necessitates the return of the saloon—then the saloon is what he wants. What is a saloon anyway? It is nothing but a name.

To allow but 8-ounces of beer for a nickel, as is proposed by the House committee, is giving nothing. Eight ounces for a nickel is the retail price of Coca Cola. If for his nickel the average man is to receive in beer only the quantity that can be contained in a Coca Cola bottle, he is being stung completely and is being refused what he voted to obtain and what he thought he would obtain. What he wants for a nickel is a drink—not two or three swallows.

If revenue is so essential for the District that we can have beer only by having a special tax of half cent per 8 ounces, why is it not equally essential to tax these soft drinks immediately?

Horse Will Not Be Made Obsolete in War, Thinks Frank Platt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, it looks as if the movement to "dehorse" the cavalry and other mounted units were going to succeed.

The watchword today, you know, is economy - here - there - and - everywhere. Horses standing in their stalls and eating their heads off, as it were, cost money; equipment when not in use requires just a little maintenance.

It would be interesting at this time to have some one tell us what experience the Japanese had with their motor equipment in Manchuria, particularly when the temperature at times was far below zero.

No one knows just when and where the next great conflict, if any, will occur. Not all wars are fought in tropical or semitropical countries. Neither are there highways nor byways throughout the length and breadth of the land.

A real test, I believe, to determine the practicability or efficiency of the motorized equipment would be to conduct a practice march, say, over mountainous country during the winter, with deep snows and freezing temperatures. To make it more interesting have a horse outfit cover the same distance along a parallel route. Let us see who shall arrive at destination on time and fit to accomplish the mission.

Somebody said that as long as there are mountains and rivers to cross, rough ground, deep snow and severe cold you will always have the horse. So that I believe that he will be with us for some time to come.

I'll stick to my horse.

Technocracy Forgets That Men Will Not Work Without Incentive.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Technocracy's idea for the reconstruction of our production and distribution system must fail because of one element I have not seen mentioned in the discussions. It is incentive.

Not over 1 man out of 100,000 is able to manage a great enterprise efficiently enough to make it survive. Those men exercise their great and specialized powers because their reward in money is great. After they have all the money they need, they continue their severe labors because money is the tangible evidence of their success.

Do away with the price system and reward them only with goods of which they have no need, beyond a limited amount, and they will, in general, refuse to exert their unique powers or to shoulder the heavy responsibility of management.

How, without the price system, can genius be kept at the head of industry beyond the fleeting period of enthusiasm for a new-born "plan?"

THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, K. C., is asked by Sir Simon Flaquer, a noted English solicitor, to defend Mrs. Paradine, who has been arrested for the murder of her husband, blind war hero. Mrs. Paradine, a beautiful Dane, had been rescued from a life of degradation in Copenhagen by an American diplomat, taken as a servant to America and later made her way to England, where she married Maj. Paradine after the war. He agrees to handle the case.

Sir Malcolm is happily married to Gay, but when he calls on Mrs. Paradine at Holloway Jail he feels the strange fascination of his beautiful client. He is worried because Lord Horfield might be named as judge of the trial and endeavors to be friendly to him. He and Gay give a little dinner party to which they ask Lord and Lady Horfield. After the party Sir Malcolm studies a photograph of William Marsh, Col. Paradine's valet, and the idea occurs to him that the man who acted in so intimate a relation to his blind master might have had an opportunity to kill him. His plan of defense begins to take form in his mind.

Gay meets a Swedish painter, Baron Sedelward, at the Flaquers' and he invites her to a private view of his paintings. Sir Malcolm decides to go to the exhibition when he learns that Sedelward was acquainted with Mrs. Paradine. He asks the painter to dine with him that night.

Judy Flaquer, Gay's friend, suspects that Sir Malcolm is neglecting Gay because of his abnormal interest in his client. Lady Horfield also warns Keane to "look out" for his wife. Keane decides to leave London to further study his defense of Mrs. Paradine.

Before leaving, Lady Horfield intimates her husband delights in conviction of defendants on trial before him. Their meeting is ended abruptly by Judge Horfield, in whom Keane detects a spirit of antagonism. After refusing to take Gay with him, he goes to Hindley Village, where he encounters Marsh at the Paradine home; Marsh, animal-like and surly.

Returning to his inn after an inspection of the mansion, Keane is surprised by a visit from Marsh.

"MY lord, I must protest against my learned friend's implication." I understand that Mr. Powers is not to be called as a witness in this case. And, therefore, I submit that it is not in order to attempt to prejudice my client by hinting at anything to her detriment which will remain unsupported by evidence on which I should have the right to cross-examine."

"What implication do you allege on the part of the learned counsel for the crown, Sir Malcolm?" asked Lord Horfield in his most gentle voice. "I noticed nothing calculated to prejudice the prisoner."

"My lord, there was in my view, a distinct suggestion that Mr. Powers had some other motive than chivalry and Christian charity in rescuing my client from the dark misery into which she had been foully inveigled."

"My lord," said Sir Joseph Farrell, "I intended no implication. I merely called attention to the fact that it was not possible to know precisely what was the motive which prompted this Mr. Powers to do what he did do, namely to take the prisoner into his service, after rescuing her from the low people with whom she was, and convey her across the seas to America."

"His and his wife's service!" interposed Keane, with cutting emphasis.

"I find nothing to rule out of order so far in the learned counsel's opening," said Lord Horfield.

"Anyway I will pass away from that," said Sir Joseph Farrell smoothly, having made his point. "As my learned friend objects I will leave it."

And he continued to deal with the past life of Mrs. Paradine.

Gay was at last looking toward the prisoner in the dock.

For the first time she really saw the woman who for so long had troubled her life, had tormented her, had taken away her peace of mind, had even taught her naturally gentle spirit the meaning of hatred. The strong glasses drew this woman close to Gay's short-sighted eyes which fixed themselves on her in a long glance of intense scrutiny.

But this look did not enable Gay to divine more than all the lawyers could tell her about Mrs. Paradine. On the contrary, she was baffled by what she saw, a tall woman with a pale face and almost silver blonde hair—she had removed her hat—dressed in brown, with her long, slim hands, very expressive, lying in her lap unclasped, and her eyes apparently fixed on the short, sturdy man with gray whiskers who was bent, it seemed, on her destruction. She sat very still. There was absolutely no symptom of restlessness in her. She did not look concerned, still less terrified, but detached, sitting there in a white composure. And immediately Gay felt her as an enigma, was deeply puzzled by her, was conscious of a great inability to understand her.

Was she beautiful? Gay believed that she had something of beauty. She was not what English people call a beauty. Still her appearance was so uncommon, so typically Northern, so impossible to ignore—and this quite apart from the horrible publicity of her present situation—that Gay felt that there must be beauty in her. But, apart from her attitude in the dock which had a curious natural grace, a sort of slouching grace, she was surely not expressive. She had a shut face—a strange blankness about it; no suggestion of animation either feverish or self-confident.

"Is she really like me?" Gay thought.

And she couldn't tell. What, indeed, could she tell about this woman?

Yes, there was one thing she could tell; that the prisoner in the dock was marvelously self-possessed, marvelously self-controlled. Was it possible that she could be so self-possessed and yet guilty?

Her brown dress—Gay could see through the glasses that it was beautifully made, though apparently very simple—was cut sufficiently low to expose the whole of her neck. And it was certainly a beautiful neck, snow white, columnar and long.

She could not take her eyes from that neck and a conviction came to her that when Mrs. Paradine put that brown dress on for the trial she had thought of the hangman and, not only that, had intended that others, the judge, perhaps, members of the jury certainly, should be caused by that beautiful and uncovered neck to think of the hangman, too.

"In spite of all he had gone through in the war; in spite of the terrible wound which had resulted in his blindness, Col. Paradine was no invalid. On the contrary—evidence would be called to prove it—he was a man of fine physique and enjoying sound health. There was no reason, so far as the doctors knew, why he should not live into a good old age. But that was not to be. It was fated that the hand of death should be laid upon him at a comparatively early period of life. Some one—it is the business of this court, if possible, to find out who—had evidently decreed this. The man who, though often in deadly peril, had yet escaped with his life from the war was destined to be struck down by a mysterious hand when the war was over."

With what a level, though harsh, utterance the voice of the prosecuting counsel ran on.

Counsel was pushing home certain traits of the dead man which must have made life with him exceedingly difficult. He seemed, Gay felt, to be doing this with a certain reluctance, anxious, if possible, to keep a balance between shining virtues—to create sympathy with a hero—and painful disabilities—to establish a probable motive for the crime alleged against the prisoner. He seemed at times to be excusing what he was also condemning. She saw him as a man balanced on a tight rope, swaying this way and that, yet somehow keeping his feet. And she began to say to herself, "But was there enough motive for such an awful thing as murder committed by that woman?"

The name, William Marsh, was several times mentioned by counsel. Gay began to feel a certain interest in this man, who had evidently been an intimate member of the Paradine household, and was destined to play an important part in the case. His virtues were dwelt upon, his soldier-like qualities, his devotion to his master, Col. Paradine, in and out of the army.

Gay began to receive an impression that this William Marsh was a man of remarkable character, perhaps even of nobility.

Her interest, already painfully vivid, increased when the speaker, always lucid, unemotional and amazingly competent, came to the question of Col. Paradine's health.

"Hitherto strong, in spite of all he had gone through in the war, it became suddenly affected. At the end of July in the year I have been speaking of he became suddenly unwell. He had severe pain in the head and there was a sensation of numbness. He complained of these, and Dr. Worthingly, of Hindley Village, was called in. Dr. Worthingly attributed the symptoms to a severe attack of dyspepsia. Whether rightly or wrongly, it will be for you, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, to judge when you have heard the case out. But I shall suggest to you that quite possibly Dr. Worthingly's diagnosis was mistaken and that this sudden attack of illness was not caused by indigestion but—" the speaker paused for a brief instant, then added—"was induced by an outside agent. I shall suggest to you that already, in that month of that year, there was a desire in the breast of some one that Col. Paradine should not enjoy length of days, but that the hand raised to strike for some reason, quite possibly a reason of sudden fear, or even possibly of sudden repentance—at that time—was paralyzed and so failed to push the blow home."

The speaker stopped for a moment. Gay looked up and saw that he was looking at the jury. Then he glanced down at some papers that were lying before him, handled them with great deliberation, lifted his hands to his shoulders, pulled at his robe, cleared his throat and added:

"At any rate, the dyspepsia, if it was dyspepsia, seemed to die away. The pain in the head ceased. The numbness—a curious symptom characteristic, by the way, of poisoning with arsenic—disappeared. And Col. Paradine seemed to be restored to his usual health. Evidence will be called presently which will, unless I am much mistaken, convince you that eventually this unfortunate hero—for with all his undoubted faults of temper and morality, Col. Paradine was certainly a British hero—that eventually he died from the administration of antimony taken in the form of tartar emetic, and, as you will learn, he died in London in a house in Eaton square which had been rented by him for a couple of months. But the fact that he died from antimony does not preclude the possibility of a former attempt to get rid of him by the administration of a different type of poison."

Another rather long pause. Then counsel said impressively, but in a lowered voice, which, nevertheless, traveled through the court:

"Now as to motive!"

He then gave a graphic account of the life at Hindley Hall after the so-called "recovery" of Col. Paradine from his attack of dyspepsia—if dyspepsia it was. Gay listened to it with absorbed attention. He drew Col. Paradine as a man increasingly miserable and embittered in his affliction of blindness, unable, in spite of his former bravery, to resign himself to this terrible blow administered, in counsel's words, "by the mysterious hand of that unknown power whom we have agreed to name God."

"There was nothing of the fatalistic resignation of the Oriental in this heroic V. C. He would have been ready, aye, content, to die for his country. To live on in darkness without complaint, without bitterness, without kicking furiously against the pricks, was another matter. Gentlemen and ladies of the jury, he could not do it. And who was there in that lonely house to bear the brunt of his misery and to listen to the voice of his complaining? Only the woman whom he had married. She had to stand it.

"It seems that she bore with him in a remarkable way, both before and after the attack of illness to which I have drawn your attention. I suggest to you, gentlemen and ladies, that she is a woman of great self-control, not an ordinary woman, but a woman of exceptional will power, capable of wearing a mask not merely for an hour, not merely for a day, but, if necessary, for months on end. I suggest to you also that she is a woman full of secret violence, who may appear to forgive, but who neither forgets nor forgives any wrong that is done to her, or anything that she conceives to be a wrong. And now I must draw your attention to certain money matters which are of considerable importance in this case."

He then informed the jury that it would be given in evidence that Col. Paradine's first attack of illness, the so-called dyspepsia, complicated with numbness from which he suffered, took place ten days after he had made a new will, leaving his wife in the event of his death an annuity of 4,000 pounds a year. This will canceled a former will made before his marriage in which, naturally, Mrs. Paradine's name did not appear. His estate of Hindley Hall was entailed, but he was a comparatively rich man. Had he died before this will was made Mrs. Paradine would have been left with nothing. After it was made, as a widow, she would be a well-off woman. Evidence will be produced to show that she was cognizant of the contents of this will. Until this will was signed Col. Paradine enjoyed excellent health. He was miserable, he was irritable, he was sometimes little less than brutal in his conduct to his wife, though there is no evidence that he ever offered her physical violence. But he was perfectly well.

Counsel paused dramatically for a moment to let that fact sink into the minds of the jury. During that moment Gay put on her spectacles and looked again at the green leather benches. She found her husband. He was sitting bolt upright. His lips were pressed together, and within the framework of his wig his face looked hard and stern. The time for him to come into action was not yet. Gay knew that he was chafing at his enforced inaction, was longing to spring up and get to work on the defense.

But the harsh voice went on inexorably. It drew the attention of the jury to a second attack of illness which overtook Col. Paradine two months after the first attack, and was of a somewhat similar nature, only more severe. Counsel touched upon the symptoms of this second attack, pains in the head, a feeling of numbness, but with the addition this time of sickness and a sensation of sinking.

On this occasion Dr. Worthingly, who was again called to the house, was more troubled by the state in which he found his patient, and questioned him closely about what he had been eating and drinking. He learned that just before the attack the colonel had eaten raw oysters, of which he was very fond. These had been sent over by a fishmonger at Whitehaven with whom the Paradines were in the habit of dealing, and were not English natives but Portuguese oysters imported into England. Dr. Worthingly apparently thought that some of these oysters, none of which had been eaten by Mrs. Paradine, or the household at Hindley, might have been tainted and in consequence caused the colonel's illness. But being somewhat puzzled by the violence of the symptoms, he desired a second opinion, and a Dr. Culford was sent for from Whitehaven and met Dr. Worthingly in consultation. The result of the consultation was that both doctors found that Col. Paradine was suffering from acute dyspepsia, but did not succeed in discovering the cause of it, though they thought it might be due to the oysters which he had eaten, none of which were left for examination.

Counsel then told the jury that Col. Paradine seemed to recover from the second attack of illness, but he remained in a very miserable, irritable and depressed frame of mind, and this—"or some other reason"—led to Mrs. Paradine suggesting a visit to London by way of a change. Perhaps she was beginning to find the retired life and Hindley with a blind husband intolerable. But she gave out that she wished Col. Paradine to be livened up, to have some amusement, and she also gave out that she thought he ought to consult a good London doctor about the state of his health. She seemed at this time to be particularly solicitous for his health and was heard to say on several occasions that she could not understand why he should have been twice seized with illness, and to express an opinion that country doctors were ignorant fools.

Col. Paradine fell in with her suggestion. A furnished house was taken in Eaton square. And the Paradines moved from Hindley and came up to London, accompanied by William Marsh and others of their servants. Col. Paradine never saw Hindley again. He died while in London after being there for about two months. Soon after arriving in London he was examined by the celebrated physician, Sir William Ackley, who found nothing the matter with him except extensive nervous depression, and who recommended that he should take a well-known preparation for strengthening the nervous system and get as much air and exercise as possible.

Counsel then passed on to the last illness and death of Col. Paradine, telling his lordship and the jury how on a certain evening during the visit in Eaton square, "after a particularly bad day of depression and irritability," more than one of the servants, as well as Mrs. Masters, the housekeeper, had heard sounds as if a violent altercation were taking place in Col. Paradine's study between him and Mrs. Paradine. No actual words were heard, but raised voices. William Marsh was one of those who, happening to be in the hall, heard these sounds. The voice of the colonel was then raised in a shout for Marsh, and the bell was also rung. Stopping the footman, who was hastening to answer the bell, Marsh went at once to the study and shut the door behind him. He remained there for a considerable time. During that time some angry quarrel seemed to be going on in the study. William Marsh would give his evidence and put before them his version of what was occurring, and the jury would be able to judge for themselves of its importance in connection with what happened later. Anyhow, after this scene, Col. Paradine refused to dine downstairs with his wife and shut himself up in a small sitting room on the first floor, next door to his bedroom. Here his dinner was served to him by Lakin, the butler, who remained with him to assist him in eating it. William Marsh was not present at this meal, nor of course was Mrs. Paradine. Lakin would give evidence that the colonel, who was evidently in a fiercely nervous condition and laboring, apparently, under some extraordinary sense of wrong, the nature of which, however, he did not disclose, drank Burgundy at dinner, and when dinner was over, directed the butler, Lakin, to put a glass full of Burgundy in his bedroom in a certain place which he indicated, so that he would know exactly where to feel for it. The butler obeyed his master's order, came back to the sitting room in which Col. Paradine was sittting alone, and said that he had done so. Col. Paradine then said that he wanted nothing more, got up and walked into the bedroom and shut the door behind him; but did not lock it.

There were two doors to this bedroom, one communicating from the colonel's sitting room, the other giving on to the main landing. The bedroom occupied by Mrs. Paradine was opposite to the colonel's bedroom.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

WHEN the University of Pittsburgh meets the University of Southern California at the annual Tournament of Roses in Pasadena, Calif., this afternoon, WRC will be a part of the network carrying the play-by-play description, beginning at 4:45 o'clock.

The Rose Bowl parade—the annual New Year's Day pageant where the decorated flower floats are entered in the festival—will be described at 1:30 o'clock.

Winners of the recently conducted radio star popularity poll will come to Washington tomorrow to receive awards from Vice President Curtis. These stars will be presented gold loving cups in a ceremony to be held at the Vice President's office tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. The ceremonies will be broadcast by Station WRC. The winners were Jessica Dragonette, Rudy Vallee, Morton Downey, Richard Gordon (Sherlock Holmes), Harry Horlick, of the A. & P. Gypsies; David Rubinoff and John S. Young.

Ed Wynn, who was also one of the winners, will not be present in person. He is in Chicago, and because of his broadcast tomorrow night will be unable to make the trip.

The contest was conducted by the American Bosch Co, and was closed December 4. Votes were cast in every State of the Union.

The radio stars will be guests of the National Press Club at a luncheon and reception at 12:30 o'clock today.

SENATOR COUZENS, of Michigan, in a sharp criticism of radio advertising, contends that some of the commercial announcements are "plainly dumb."

"Whether any effort has been made by broadcasters to ascertain the views of radio listeners, I do not know," Senator Couzens is quoted as saying in the January 1 issue of Broadcasting magazine, "but I expect if an inquiry were made, they would be astounded to find how many radios were snapped off because of the long and tiresome discussions of the merits of the goods advertised.

"Nothing seems to be left to the imagination of the listener. Every person knows that the statements of the advertiser are biased, and may or may not be true.

"Many sales are lost because of the irritation of the listener at the long, tiresome advertising talks. They are not even expressed well, and lack any diversity of expression so that they become hopelessly futile."

THE New Year's party of the Washington radio editors was such a success that it promises to be an annual affair here. It was held at the Willard Hotel and the committee in charge was composed of James E. Chinn, of the Evening Star; Don Craig, jr., the News; Lillian Cutlip, the Herald, and Florence V. Kaiser, The Washington Post.

The members of the staffs of all the local radio stations and local radio entertainers were invited.

Ruth Etting, accompanied by Leonard Hayton's Orchestra, with Norman Brokenshire as master of ceremonies, will inaugurate the new Chesterfield program series over WJSV at 9 o'clock tonight. Tom Howard and George Shelton, comedians, will be heard with Hayton's Orchestra tomorrow night. Bing Crosby is on the air Wednesday night in the quarter hour program.

FOLKS are having a lot of fun with the little toy microphones. With them it is possible to make the uninitiated believe the message he hears is really coming from a broadcasting station. As a matter of fact the talking is only in the next room and what is said can not be heard outside of that particular house.

Several friends were in the home of Harry C. Butcher, of Columbia, recently, when the latter, who had previously connected up the toy microphone, left the group unnoticed and began talking into the little microphone from the next room. He said the police were looking for a hit and run driver—described one of the guests as the person sought, gave a description of his car and his auto tag number.

Thinking it was a real broadcast, the guest almost exploded, and it was only after they explained the joke to him that he returned to normalcy.

Oswald F. Schuette, of the National Broadcasters, relates a similar trick played upon his brother-in-law, Abner Drury.

"All firemen off duty are asked to report at once to their stations on account of a fire, for which five alarms have been sounded, which threatens to destroy the Abner Drury brewery in Georgetown" was the message supposedly being broadcast.

Mr. Drury was dumfounded to hear this and was only prevented from making a hasty exit from the party by friends who explained the joke to him.

As long as the thing is in good fun, all right, but a Washington police official declared if any one attempted to use the little microphones seriously to imitate police broadcasts, he could be arrested and subjected to fine and imprisonment for impersonating an officer.

This of course would have to be an alleged police broadcast used by those who were actually perpetrating a crime. No such case has yet come up and there is no law to cover it, but the police officer said he felt sure it would be summarily dealt with if it did.

THE Thompson Dairymen (WRC, 7:15 o'clock) will recall several "old, old songs," a group of "songs you'll always remember" and a "review of the past season's hits" in their quarter-hour program tonight.

Judge Ira E. Robinson, former chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, has suggested the following for the Columbia station in Washington, now seeking a new slogan:

"This is WJSV—On the borders of the old Confederacy."

The New York State gubernatorial inauguration will be broadcast from Albany over WJSV, beginning at 11:45 a. m. today. Among those whose speeches will be carried over the network will be President-elect Roosevelt, the retiring governor; Alfred E. Smith, former governor, and Herbert H. Lehmann, whose induction to the office will be signalized by the ceremonies.

SENATOR C. C. DILL, of Washington, will presage events in 1933 when he appears on the National Radio Forum over WRC. . . . Morton Downey will be heard on a new schedule of sustaining quarter-hour broadcasts over WJSV at 10 o'clock every Monday and Friday. . . . Boake Carter, Philadelphia radio news editorialist, will be featured in a new series of broadcasts five nights a week over WJSV at 7:45 o'clock, under Philco sponsorship. . . . Henrik Ibsen's "The Doll's House" will be the Radio Guild presentation (WRC, 4 p. m.) today. . . . Kate Smith will be heard on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, beginning tomorrow at 8:30 o'clock. . . . Howard Barlow will conduct his symphony orchestra in a special New Year's program at 3 o'clock this afternoon, WJSV.

Mrs. Mills Pleads For Child Rights

Treasury Chief's Wife in Favor of Maintaining Amusements.

Pointing out that if the children of America are lost, all will be lost, Mrs. Ogden L. Mills yesterday appealed to the people of Washington for whole-hearted support of the National Recreation Association.

The objective of the association, founded in 1906 with the aid of Theodore Roosevelt, Jane Addams, Joseph Lee and others, is to aid every child in America in obtaining an opportunity to find the best and most satisfying use of leisure time, Mrs. Mills said.

Expenditures of the association have been cut 50 per cent, yet its work has been increased because of the need to protect cities from the assaults of unwise economy. The sharp increase in attendance at public recreation centers since 1929 shows that the unemployed are turning to free recreational opportunities, Mrs. Mills said.

Center Completes Amusement Plans

"The Mikado" to Be Offered by Opera Group on January 20.

The Community Center Department has completed plans for entertainment which will be presented during the first three months of the year.

Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta, "The Mikado" will be presented by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group at 8 p. m., January 20, at the Roosevelt High School auditorium. The District one-act play tournament will be held the last two weeks of February.

Another event of interest will be the dance recital early in March by Lester Shafer, Marian Chace and their Washington Denishawn Dance Group, under the auspices of the Community Center Department, at the Central High School Auditorium. New dances and a spectacular medieval ballet will be the features of this program.

New York Death Rate Lowest Ever in 1932

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The city's death rate for 1932 was the lowest in history, Health Commissioner Shirley W. Wynne reported to Mayor John P. O'Brien today.

"Heretofore 1927 had been the most healthful yaer experienced by New York City," the report said. "In that year the general death rate from all causes was 10.71 per 1,000 population and the infant death rate 56 per 1,000 births. In 1931 the respective rates were 10.92 and 55.6. During the year just closed the general death rate was only 10.3 per 1,000 of population and the infant mortality rate was 50.9 per 1,000 births."

Harvard May Curb Needy.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Student demands for scholarship loans and employment at Harvard have so far exceeded the available resources the college heads are considering the advisability of limiting the admission of students who will need such assistance, Dean A. C. Hanford said last night.

S. CALIFORNIA-PITT BATTLE TODAY BEFORE 75,000

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

CLARK GRIFFITH, the old fox, and Joe Cronin, the young maestro, freely admitted after their recent series of trades that the deals were engineered particularly with an eye toward fortifying the Nats against the Yankees and Athletics, the two teams which stand squarely across any path to the pennant.

To that end, the addition of the two southpaws, Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart, is expected to be of great assistance it was indicated by both Griffith and Cronin, who for the past several years have realized the Nats' lack of southpaw hurling talent to fling against these two very-much-left-handed clubs.

So imagine this department's surprise to learn from the official records, dispensed by Henry Edwards, of the American League Service Bureau, that the two regular pitchers released by the Nats, Fred Marberry and Lloyd Brown, had a far more impressive record against the Yankees and the A's than did Stewart and Whitehill, who were obtained chiefly for their value against such competition.

Fared Poorly Against A's and Yanks.

Brown and Marberry last season showed a .500 percentage against the Yankees and the Athletics with seven victories and seven defeats as their record against these two clubs, while Whitehill and Stewart's combined efforts netted only seven victories and fourteen defeats.

Whitehill and Stewart were particularly ineffective against the Yankees, the former failing to win a decision in five games. Stewart's record was slightly better, but nothing to write Aunt Fanny about. The Yankees raked Stewart for four victories in five starts against the St. Louis southpaw. Against the A's, Whitehill did manage to win two games against one defeat, while Stewart broke even in eight engagements with the Mackmen.

The Nats lose in Lloyd Brown their most effective pitcher against the Yankees, for this stumpy southpaw beat New York four times against three defeats. He broke even in two decisions with the A's. Marberry started twice against the Yanks and emerged with decisions on both occasions, but was a great risk against the Athletics, losing three games and winning none.

Griffith and Cronin Probably Knew.

But it is hardly correct to assume that Griffith and Cronin were unaware of these uncomplimentary figures concerning Whitehill's and Stewart's success against the two teams the Nats fear most.

Consideration must be given the fact that both Whitehill and Stewart were performing with second-division clubs without benefit of the better fielding and batting support they would have received with the Nats. Griffith, particularly, is confident that both pitchers are the type that will cause the Yankees and the A's difficulty.

Cronin pointed out to this department before he departed for San Francisco that Stewart's transfer to Griffith Stadium is calculated to improve the former Brown southpaw's effectiveness. Stewart, Cronin said, would be more free to use his fast ball within the confines of Griffith's Stadium's far-flung fences as compared to band-box Sportsman's Park at St. Louis, where glorified pop flies went over the fences for homers. And Cronin likes Stewart's fast ball.

Powerful Hurling Staff.

At this early date, the Nats' pitching staff has the unmistakable earmarks of the most powerful hurling corps to grace a Washington roster since the pennant winning days of 1924 and 1925.

Whitehill and Stewart, both reckoned as consistent winners, provide the Nats with two more regulars to work in rotation with Alvin Crowder and Monte Weaver. In the second flight of pitchers will be Alphonse Thomas and Bill McAfee, either of whom might blossom into dependable starters and occasion little surprise.

Monte Weaver's 22 victories against ten defeats in his first big league campaign is shining evidence of the rookie's skill. First year successes have been known to fade rapidly in their second season when their style is no longer a novelty to big league batters, but this tradition is hardly applicable to Weaver. Weaver's style is poignantly orthodox and much of his success was due to his headwork on the mound. He doesn't rely purely on the power in his arm and the fact that there is no novelty in his delivery augurs for his continued success.

PLENTY OF CHAMPIONS.

Baltimoreans Defeat D. C. Boys, 12-6

Blocked Punts Bring All Scores in Charity Grid Fray.

3,500 Witness Game Played on Muddy Stadium Field.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 1.—Three blocked kicks, all recovered behind some goal line or other for touchdowns, sum up the story of Washington's 12-6 defeat at the hands of Baltimore, here today, in a game between all-star scholastic teams of the two cities. A crowd of approximately 3,500 brayed the freezing weather to see the teams battle and lend a helping hand to Baltimore's poor.

Fortified with a powerful forward wall, heavy and well balanced, and two sets of swift, but otherwise impotent ball carriers, the Capital City aggregation's running attack was severely handicapped by ankle-deep mud which increased in depth as the sun's rays thawed the frost-bitten turf.

Washington elected to play a wide-open game, frequently attempting passes, and circling ends, while its opponent resorted to the time-honored strategy of playing safe and waiting for the breaks.

Trick Play Fails To Score.

The final score bears out the sagacity of the Oriole plan of battle, but not until the mud-splattered schoolboys from the Nation's Capital had outplayed them by a wide margin in the first three periods and pulled a trick play that almost resulted in a touchdown.

Baltimore never got beyond its own 45-yard line in the initial period. Playing a six-man line, with a 1-2-2 defense, the Senators smeared play after play as their rivals vainly attempted to knife through the line But neither could Washington make very much headway against the stout defense of the opposition.

Washington's coach, Orrel Mitchell, inserted a brand-new team with the advent of the second quarter, and on the second play Joe Mills faked an end run to the right, only to halt dead in his tracks and hurl a long pass at Johnson, standing in the clear to the left side of the field. It looked like a touchdown, but the slippery ball eluded the grasp of its intended receiver.

Baltimore's patient game of wait-and-see bore fruit a short time after, when Left End Powers smashed through and blocked Joe Mills' attempted punt on the 15-yard line. The ball bounded crazily in the end zone, where the same player flopped on it for the score. The try for point was low.

Again in the third period the efficacy of the Orioles' plan of attack was borne out when Overton broke through and blocked "Huck" Hilleary's kick on the 5-yard line. This time Piaro scooped up the leather as it rolled over the goal linee.

Starting Team Returns To Action.

Mitchell substituted the starting team at this juncture and the boys responded in noble fashion. Their fighting spirit at white heat, the Senators worked the ball into Baltimore territory. Kiski's quick kick, a low spiral, that traveled 50 yards, put the pigskin deep in the Marylanders' territory. Two line plays were futile and Grochmal dropped back to punt. As the ball left Grochmal's toe it came in contact with the huge bulk of Jim Mathers, Washington tackle, and rebounded back into the end zone, where Mathers completed the play by falling on it for a touchdown.

It is difficult to single out any one player as outstanding for the lads from the Potomac. Let it suffice to say they measured up to expectations. Ray Signa and Joe Keegin sparkled in the ranks of the ball carriers with their frequent jaunts off tackle and around the ends for gains of from 7 to 10 yards.

Irving Jaffee Beaten In Ice-Skating Upset

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Everett McGowan, St. Paul professional, surprised skating fans today by defeating Irving Jaffee, youthful Olympic champion, in two out of three exhibition races, in which two unofficial world records were set.

McGowan won the 500 and 1,500 meter events, setting a time of 2:38 for the latter distance, announced by race officials as 7.8 seconds faster than the indoor mark set by Ivar Ballengrud, of Norway, in a post-Olympic race at the Chicago Stadium last February.

Jaffee, who won his Olympic laurels at the longer distance, took the third race, 3,000 meters, in 5:37.8 said to be a professional record for indoors since the previous mark under the metric system, recently adopted, was made on outdoor ice.

Three races will be run Monday at 1,000, 2,000 and 3,000 meters.

West Choice Over East Gridmen

35,000 to See Eighth Contest Today at San Francisco.

Newman Holds Hopes of East; West Is Powerful in Line.

By RUSSELL J. NEWLAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Cleated stars of the football world of 1932 will roam the turf again tomorrow in the gridiron classic here that annually pits the pick of the East against some of the best of the West for charity.

Some 35,000 fans, possibly more, are expected to turn out for the clash of two mighty squads, manned by several all-Americans and many near-greats from the country's gridirons.

The eighth yearly battle, whose proceeds go into the benefit fund of the Shriners Cripled Children's Hospital, will see the West lined up as favorite, chiefly because of a powerful line.

The Western line will average around 197 pounds to the man compared to a 183-pound average for the Easterners. The East has won three and the West four of the annual tilts.

Newman Holds East's Hopes.

Eastern hopes will center in an imposing back field combination that includes one of the most talked of all-Americans of 1932, Harry Newman, Michigan quarter back. Newman is favoring an ankle injured in practice last week, but is expected to see plenty of action nevertheless. Under the Warner system as coached by Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley, Newman is slated for left half back.

Newman's back-of-the-line associates include Jack Manders of Minnesota, Roy Horstmann of Purdue, Bob Rowe, Colgate; Gil Berry, Illinois; Pug Rentner, Northwestern; Joe Crowley, Yale; Bart Viviano, Cornell, and Joe Zapustas, handy man from Fordham.

Two All-American ends, Paul Moss of Purdue, and Joee Martinez-Zorrilla of Cornell, will match pass-snatching brilliance in the "wide open game" the Eastern strategists hope will bring victory to their banner.

Unable to call the role on a parade of All-Americans, the West will stake its chances on a squad of stalwarts fine-combed from the pigskin battlefields of Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, the Rocky Mountain region and the Pacific slope.

The Western line is powered with such performers as Lawrence Ely, Nebraska center, who will captain the team and weighs 202 pounds; Bill Morgan, Oregon tackle, whose 223 pounds makes him the heaviest man on either squad; Oscar Higuera, University of San Francisco tackle, a 207 pounder; Jack Johnson, 212 pound Utah tackle, and Dick Tozer, California tackle, a 205 pound stripling. The guards are less bulky, but balance the scales close to 200 pounds, nevertheless.

Big Boys Play At Ends.

Ralph Stone, Olympic Club, and Steve Hokuf, Nebraska, expected to start at end positions, are mere lads of 203 pounds and 195 pounds, respectively.

The West's ball packers include the triple threat stars, George Sander, of Washington State, and Hank Schaldach, of California, with Frank Christensen, line cracking Utah luminary; Harry Stafford, Texas, and Max Krause, Gonzaga, as outstanding reinforcements.

While the West is expected to confine much of its yard gaining activities to the ground, the squad also has been drilled in a strong aerial attack. The East's practice program indicated it would emphasize on passes.

Probable starting line-ups:

East.	Position.	West.
Moss, Purdue	L. E.	Stone, Olympic
Wells, Minn.	L. T.	Morgan, Oregon
Smith, Colgate	L. G.	Senn, W. State
Gilbane, Brown	Center	Ely, Nebraska

Kurth, N. Dame	R. T.	Johnson, Utah
Fencl, N'thw'n	R. E.	Hokuf, Nebraska
Viviani, Cornell	Q. B.	Sander, W. State
Berry, Illinois	L. H.	Brovelli, St. Mary
Rentner, N'thw'n	R. H.	Stafford, Texas
Horstmann, Pur.	F. B.	Krause, Gonzaga

Referee—Bob Evans (Millikan). Umpire—Lloyd Yoder (Carnegie Tech). Field judge—Tom Fitzgerald. Head linesman—Bob Kelly.

Central and Alumni Fives to Play Today

Central's widely publicised basket ball team will be treated to an exhibition of how the game was played by teams at the school a few years ago when it tackles the alumni quintet today at 3 o'clock. Maybe the older fellows will pick up a point or two on the art of bringing home the bacon. The contest is a feature of alumni day at the Mount Pleasant School.

Election of officers of the Alumni Association, card party, dance, and swimming meet are listed.

AUTO RACE TO TRIPLETT.

Los Angeles, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Ernie Triplett, Los Angeles motor race driver, today won the 31¼-mile feature race in 23 minutes 13 seconds at the Legion Ascot Speedway.

Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, was second; Sam Palmer, of Hollywood, third; Kelly Petillo, of Los Angeles, fourth; Bill Cummings, of Indianapolis, fifth, and Babe Stapp, of Indianapolis, sixth. The 1¼-mile Italian Helmet dash was won by Cummings in 0:53:87 seconds.

Revolta Wins Miami Open With 278

Youth Defeats Shute by 4 Strokes; Sarazen Third.

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Setting a pace that earned for him the title of "John, the Giant Killer," young John Revolta, of Menominee, Mich., today won the seventh annual Miami open golf tournament with a 72-hole score of 278. He got $650 for his efforts.

Slipping slightly from the course record shattering 66—68—134 for the first 36 holes, Revolta today posted two eighteen-hole rounds of 72 strokes each.

Revolta, who is 21, jumped into the lead with his first round, and withstood the determined drive of more seasoned campaigners at the finish.

Denny Shute, of Cleveland, Ohio, who topped Revolta in the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore open, finished second to the youngster today, carding 67—71—72—72—282.

Sarazen Finishes Third

Three strokes behind Shute came Gene Sarazen, British and American open champion, with a typical Sarazen finish of 69 strokes for the last eighteen holes. That gave him four rounds of 71—72—73—69—285.

Revolta's score today was five strokes better than the world's major competition record of 283 set by Sarazen in winning the British open last spring.

Henry Ciuci, of Fresh Meadow, Long Island, slipped to 76 on his last round today, after finishing 36 holes second to Revolta, and took fourth place for the 72 holes. He had cards of 69—68—73—76—286.

Walter Hagen, of Detroit, and John Rouse, of Chicago, finished in a tie for fifth place with 290 strokes, followed by Phil Perkins, of New York, former British amateur champion recently turned pro, with 291.

John Golden, of Noroton, Conn., landed eighth place with 292, followed by Ralph Stonehouse, of Indianapolis, with 293, and Ralph Kingsrud, of Fargo, N. D., and Charles Lacey, of Lakeville, N. Y., with 295 each.

Four players tied for the next four places, with 298 strokes each. They were Andy Kay, of Toronto; John Watson, of South Bend, Ind.; Billie Burke, of Greenwich, Conn., former national open champion, and Jim Martucci, of Teterboro, N. J.

Course Is Only Foe Of Youth.

This is Revolta's second big tournament of the winter. He finished second to Denny Shute in the $10,000 Miami Biltmore Open. But strokes mean money and glory in professional golf, and Revolta is out for both.

"Golf is my game," he says, "I'm playing the game and the course—not the other fellows."

Revolta already knew the thrill of title winning. Before he reached his legal majority of years, he won the Michigan open in 1930 and 1931, and against the cream of Michigan pro-

Notre Dame Football Gospel Is Preached by 91 Coaches

Rockne Style Taught Throughout United States in Colleges, High and Prep Schools, and in Pro Ranks.

By KENNETH D. FRY.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Notre Dame's football heroes carry on Notre Dame football tradition in a far flung coaching empire, extending from South Bend to all the borders of the United States.

Ninety-one members of former Notre Dame gridiron machines coached teams last season, ranging through universities, colleges, academies, high schools, the professional field, and one prison eleven. The universal success attending the efforts of those trained under the Rockne system is shown by the results.

Bachman and Miller Without Jobs.

Today only two Notre Dame men who coached during 1932 are without assignments. Charles Bachman, coach at the University of Florida, has resigned. So had Don Miller, of Four Horsemen fame, who quit as back field coach at Ohio State. James Phelan, who coached Purdue to a championship and then moved to Washington, hasn't decided whether he'll go back or not. His name has been connected with Fordham and Chicago jobs.

Five former Irish stars are carrying on at Notre Dame: Heartley Anderson, Nordhoff Hoffman, Marchmont Schwartz, John Voedisch, and Thomas Karr. Roger Kiley and Chet Wynne put Alabama Polytechnic into a tie for Southern honors last fall.

Charles Dorais, a team mate of Rockne, is successful at Detroit, with Bud Boeringer and Harvey Brown as assistants. The Four Horsemen are scattered. Crowley heads the Michigan State staff. Stuhldreher is at Villanova. Layden is at Duquesne. Miller was at Ohio.

Carideo's Missouri Team Disappoints.

Frank Carideo, of Notre Dame fame, had a bad year at Missouri, but he is likely to remain there. Noble Kizer's Purdue eleven was unbeaten, and tied once, in the Big Ten in 1932.

Edward "Slip" Madigan has built formidable elevens at St. Mary's, Oakland, Calif. Paul "Bucky" O'Connor and Adam Walsh are assistants at Yale. Rip Miller is Navy coach, aided by Christie Flanagan and John O'Brien. Harry Mehre heads the Georgia staff, with two Notre Dame assistants.

The rest of the former Notre Dame players now coaching follow:

Joseph Bach, Duquesne; Norman Barry, De La Salle, Chicago; Harry Baujan, Dayton; Joseph Benda, St. John's, Collegeville, Minn.; Arthur Bergman, Catholic U., Washington; Joseph Boland, College of St. Thomas, St. Paul; Martin Brill, La Salle, Philadelphia; Jack Cannon, Georgia Tech; Glenn Carberry, Michigan State; William Cerney, North Carolina; Charles Collins, North Carolina; Thomas Conley, La Salle, Philadelphia.

Dutch Bergman, George Vik and Forrest Cotton, Catholic U., Washington; Clem Crowe, Xavier, Cincinnati; Joseph Dienhart, Cathedral High, Indianapolis; Daniel Duffy, Holy Name, Cleveland; Wilbur Eaton, Howard Payne; Eugene Edwards, St. Vincent's, Beatty, Pa.; Mal Edward, Purdue; Jack Elder, Catholic Youth Organization, Chicago; Rex Enright, Georgia; A. J. Gebert, Wichita; Barry Holton, Wichita Fall, Tex.

Al Howard, North Carolina; Ed Hunsinger, Villanova; William Jones, Carroll, Helena, Mont.; Thomas Kasper, South Dakota State; Thomas Kenneally, Rutgers; Daniel Lamont, Washington; Frank Leahy, Michigan State; Jay Lee, Buffalo; Thomas Lieb, Loyola, Los Angeles; Joseph Locke, Wichita; Frank Mayer, St. Thomas, St. Paul; Jack Meagher, Rice Institute; Joseph Meyer, Xavier, Cincinnati; Larry Mullins, St. Benedict's, Atchison, Kans.

Eugene Murphy, Columbia, Portland, Oreg.; John McManmon, Boston U.; Vincent McNally, St. Mary's, Oakland, Calif.; Joseph Nash, New Mexico; John Niemiec, Rice Institute; John Noppenberger, Spaulding, Peoria, Ill.; Eugene Oberst, Canisius; George Philbrook, Nevada; Robert Reagan, Villanova; Frank Reese, North Carolina State; Charles Riley, New Mexico; Lawrence Shaw, Santa Clara; George Shay, Manhattan; John Smith, North Carolina State; Maurice ("Clipper") Smith, Santa Clara; Frank Thomas, Alabama.

Tulane Grid Stars Beat Loyola, 6-0

Banker, Dalrymple and Moore Shine in Bitter Clash of Rivals.

New Orleans, Jan. 1 (U.P.)—Old favorites returned to the football field today and Tulane University's All-Stars took a desperately fought 6 to 0 decision from the great and former great of Loyola of the South.

Bill Banker heaved forward passes that matched his best efforts as Tulane's captain and All-American halfback in 1930. Jack Holland, once of All-Southern fame, was there with willing hands to receive them.

Jerry Dalrymple, last year's All-American end, once more crashed the line with a vengeance. "Bucky" Moore, Loyola's former "Dixie Flyer" and more recently a Chicago professional player, matched him lunge for lunge, until, in the third period, Bucky tried to run with the ball and Jerry piled him six yards behind his line, throwing him with such a force that he injured Moore's shoulder and forced him to quit the game.

The Dalrymple-Moore feud was one of several that enlivened the contest. The game was a New Orleans classic, a rare contest between two universities whose campuses stand on adjoining grounds, and who acknowledge such a rivalry that all varsity athletic and social relations are taboo between them.

Dalrymple led the defensive for Tulane and held Loyola to three first downs. Moore did the same work for Loyola and held Tulane to four first downs.

The only score came in the second period, when Banker passed over the goal line to Holland.

Rudolph Takes Cue Match From Greenleaf

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, defeated the national champion, Ralph Greenleaf, in their special 1750 point exhibition pocket billiard match, completed at the Strand tonight, by the close margin of 26 points.

Rudolph, who won the afternoon block 125 to 98 in ten innings, was outscored by Greenleaf in the final block tonight, 154 to 125 in 21 innings, but won the match, 1750 to 1724.

Rudolph had a high run of 80 this afternoon and 38 tonight; Greenleaf's best clusters were 66 and 53.

Title Chance Is Offered Goodman

Gets Jadick Bout at Portner's If He Beats Stetz.

JOEY GOODMAN, Richmond, Va., 140-pounder who battles K. O. Tony Stetz, Wilkes Barre, Pa., coal miner, tomorrow night in the feature eight-round bout at Portner's Arena, may be pitted against Johnny Jadick, junior welterweight champion, in a title match at the Alexandria ring the latter part of this month, Promoter Frankie Mann last night announced.

Goodman's chances for facing Jadick with the latter's championship at stake depend upon his showing against Stetz. Two Washington sportsmen, Sam Beard and Bill Moses, have instructed Matchmaker Mann to proceed with arrangements for the scrap.

"The match is a fixture for Portner's if Goodman is impressive in his victory," Promoter Mann stated.

Jadick to Risk Title Here.

"Jadick's manager, Johnny Burns, promoter at the Candria Club in Philadelphia, is an old friend of mine and has consented to the title match, depending upon Joey's showing," said Mann.

Jadick, a Philadelphia boy, holds decisions over such stalwarts as Tony Canzoneri and Al Foreman, the latter being well known for his exploits in District and nearby rings.

Goodman yesterday tapered off for his bout with a brisk workout at the Jewish Community Center. Earlier in the day he ran a couple of miles around West Potomac Park. In the gym he shadow-boxed, skipped rope and sparred with some amateur boys. The flashy Hebrew boxer steps into the ring with an imposing string of victories and a record that stamps him as one of the topnotchers in the junior welterweight division. His opponent, Stetz, a southpaw, won fourteen straight fights via the knockout route until he lost by a foul to Arthur DeBeve a few weeks ago at Portner's.

On the eve of the 30-round program for the benefit of the Alexandria Day Nursery, Matchmaker Mann announced a change in the eight-round semiwindup.

Brown, Ill, Cancels Bout.

Buster Brown, Baltimore gladiator, who was scheduled to box Roy Manley, of Arkansas, was forced to cancel his engagement due to illness. Heinie Blaustein, Brown's manager, wired Mann yesterday, reporting his boxer had a case of grip. Promoter Mann dickered with Tootsie Bashara, swift-punching Norfolk battler, and the Seaside boy will face Manley. Bashara will be remembered for his knockout of Sailor McKenna. Recently he knocked out Johnny Travers in the fourth round and stopped Young Altis in two rounds.

Joey Schwartz and Leroy Dougan will open the card with a four-rounder. Barefoot Green and Babe Hollingsworth are scheduled to step in another four, while Bob Lowry and Joe Raspi will mix in the main preliminary bout of six.

Tickets are on sale at Vic's Sport Shop.

Hecht Heavy Choice In Junior Finals Today

New York, Jan 1 (A.P.).—Mark Hecht, University of Pennsylvania sophomore, may or may not equal Vincent Richard's feat of winning three consecutive national junior indoor tennis championships, but he already has set up one unofficial mark.

In reaching the finals of the current championship along with Richard K. Gebard, of Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., Hecht has lost only eight games in five matches. Officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association said this probably was a record in national junior indoor play.

The Penn star, holder of the title for two years, was in top form as he swept aside John Nogrady, of St. John's College, Brooklyn, 6—1, 6—2, in the semifinals yesterday. Nogrady, who had eliminated the fourth seeded player, Bernard Friedman, of the University of North Carolina, the previous day, never had a chance with the champion.

Hebard, a four-letter athlete at Hill, likewise was impressive in winning from Giles Verstraten, of New York, 8—6, 6—2, but experts conceded him little chance of beating Hecht in the finals tomorrow.

Trojans Held Favorites At 2 to 1

Unbeaten Foes Clash in Annual Rose Bowl Contest.

Panthers, on Scene, Don New Uniforms for Public Drill.

By BRIAN BELL.

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Pittsburgh's Panthers, who went through an undefeated but twice-tied football season, arrived today for a test of speed and strength with Southern California in the Rose Bowl tomorrow.

The Eastern representatives in the annual Tournament of Roses game went to church and then, blossoming out in new uniforms of gold and blue, ran through a brisk 15-minute drill in the big bowl.

After the practice, which was open to the public in contrast to secret practices at Tucson, Ariz., the Panthers returned to their hotel to await the next march to the bowl, which will be just in time for the starting whistle tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

Southern California's Trojans, quartered at another Pasadena hotel close to the bowl, were left much to their own devices today, enjoined only to get out in the bright sunshine. Some played golf and others went for long walks.

Weight Advantage To Trojans.

The Western team will enter the big battle with a decided weight advantage, the Trojans outscaling the Panthers in every position except fullback, were Isadore Weinstock, at 187, outweighs Gordon Clark, 175. Pittsburgh, however, hopes to make up for lack of poundage with superior speed. Some Southern Californians prone to view with alarm think, too, the visitors may be able to display an advantage in kicking as Bob Hogan, Pitt Quarter, is held in high respect in this department

Coach John B. Sutherland said the Pittsburgh team was in good condition.

"It's a good team, too," he said, adding it remained to be seen if it was good enough.

Coach Howard Jones' last words to his Trojans were that if they expected to push the Panthers around they would be in for a most unpleasant time tomorrow.

Jones Expects Hard Battle.

"We know Pitt has a good team," said the reserved Jones, "and we expect the hardest sort of battle."

Supporters at large of Southern California thought the Western team rated a decided favorite and made their bets accordingly. Odds ranged up to 2 to 1.

A brisk advance sale assured a large, but not capacity crowd. The Rose Bowl will accommodate approximately 85,000 spectators. An attendance in the neighborhood of 75,000 was estimated.

A weather forecast of fair, warm weather was a break for the management. The turf was firm and fast.

Pittsburgh.	Position.	S. California.
Dailey	L. E.	Sparling
Cuba	L. T.	Brown
Hartwell	L. G.	Rosenberg
Tormey	Center	Youel
Onder	R. G.	Stevens
Walton	R. T.	Smith

Coast Pro-Amateur To Hambrick and Ross

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.). Archie Hambrick, 26-year-old professional from Zanesville, Ohio, and Jim Ross, local four-handicap amateur, started the new year off right today by winning the Santa Monica $2,000 amateur-pro golf tournament with a best ball card of 63.

They worked together as a well matched team, and although each shot the course in 71s, they kept their birdies and eagles so well distributed that they turned the first round in 32 and came back in 31.

Hambrick won $200 first prize money, which, with his stake on Friday of $75 for second place with a 65, made him the leading money winner of the three-day championship

Birdies, eagles and even a hole in one rattled off the clubs of today's performers with such regularity that aggregate scores of 67, 4 under par, were necessary to place in the money. Eleven twosomes tied at 67 to collect $5.35 each.

PEPPER MARTIN STARS.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The Memphis Tigers defeated "Pepper" Martin's professional football team here today 19 to 13.

Martin contributed to his team's two touchdowns, one on a 75-yard gallop and the other on a 25-yard run after catching a pass.

LADYSMAN SEEN WINTER BOOK FAVORITE FOR 1933 DERBY

Boilermaker Is Hope of Bradley

Bubbling Over Colt Sound; Sun Archer Boasts Backers.

The Darb, Caterwaul, Kerry Patch Are Other Prospects.

By C. ROBERT KAY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The turn of the year today touched off the swelling chorus of discussion of the all-absorbing topic of Kentucky turf followers—what thoroughbred will win the 1933 Kentucky Derby, to be raced May 6 at Churchill Downs.

Yesterday's 2-year-olds are today's 3-year-olds, and all are potential winners of the historic $50,000 added stake. January 1 is the official birthday of all American thoroughbreds, regardless of the date on which they are foaled.

Turf experts the country over are singing the praises of W. R. Coe's Ladysman, which raced to a brilliant record as a juvenile. Ladysman no doubt will be the winter book favorite to capture the Derby, by virtue of his victories in the Hopeful Stakes at Saratoga and other turf fixtures.

Bradley Victory Would Be Popular.

Conceding he is the horse to beat, Blue Grass turf followers are casting about, of course, for a Kentucky-owned horse to turn the trick. The most popular victory locally, perhaps, would be that of the colors of Col. E. P. Bradley, who holds the record of having produced three Derby winners.

The genial Blue Grass turfman is expected to make his principal bid with Boilermaker, which he considers right now to be his best prospect. Boilermaker, withdrawn from racing last season when he developed osselets, is now perfectly sound.

Should Boilermaker win, he would bring added laurels to his sire, Bubbling Over, now one of two horses to have won a Derby and sired a Derby winner. Burgoo King, which won last year's Derby for Col. Bradley, was by Bubbling Over, winner of the 1926 Derby.

C. V. Whitney, whose father, Harry Payne Whitney, won two Derbys, will have a strong entry in The Darb, winner of the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes, and Caterwaul. Whitney owned Equipoise and Top Flight, winter book favorites for the past two years, but they did not get to the post in the Derby.

Kerry Patch, owned by L. Rosenberg and surprise winner of the Belmont Futurity, is a leading contender. Willis Sharpe Kilmer, whose famed Sun Beau raced to a world record for money winnings, has an excellent prospect in Sun Archer. Many other leading juveniles of last year, if they survive the rigors of training, should conspire to create a brilliant field for this year's blue ribbon event.

Manhattan, Miami Set for Game Today

Cold Weather Forecast to Give New York Eleven Edge.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Manhattan College, of New York, and University of Miami, coached by some of the best brains in football, play tomorrow afternoon in the inaugural of what Miami hopes will become an annual football classic to rival the Rose Bowl affairs in California.

Cold, cloudy weather forecast for tomorrow favors the Northerners, coached by Chick Meehan. University of Miami players, however, have been under the tutelage of the famed Bob Zuppke, of Illinois, and a fairly even battle is looked for.

Meehan, on arrival here last week with his team, said he would employ the best features of a half dozen systems against Miami and would leave the method of attack up to Pendergrast, his ace back.

Zuppke came here over a week ago to take charge of the Miami team that had only an average season. He has worked the men hard and the eleven appeared to be on edge for tomorrow's fight.

An elaborate program has been arranged for tomorrow. There will be a long parade with numerous floats and bands. Miss Marguerite Sweat, University of Miami coed, will be crowned queen of the palm festival by Henry L. Doherty, utilities magnate, just before the game starts.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

JEFFERSON PARK, JANUARY 1.

DEAR AL:

Happy New Year, friend. More winners and better prices is my resolution and believe me, pal, if I can put over some of these that I have dug up for tomorrow we won't have to worry about price. I recommend that you give them a trial. As far as results are concerned, I had decided to turn over a new leaf but I can't help taking the blame for waking up The French Rose last Saturday. Well, here we are just away from the barrier in 1933 with the same horses a whole year older. If the new year doesn't do anything but bring a fast track here I'll be satisfied. And tonight, it appears that such is a possibility late tomorrow.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—SANDWRACK gets in this with only 103 pounds and appears to be the outstanding good thing of the day. The son of Wrack has all his speed these days and I can't see the stable passing up this opportunity to collect a purse. BARNEY SEXTON was primed for a killing at Bowie and missed. This fellow is ready to give the top one a battle, DISTRESS SIGNAL is improved and may be third.

SECOND RACE—ANNE ARUNDLE ran Panchio to a nose and drops a wad of weight today against a less formidable field. Has speed ehough to break from an outside post but must get some scratches to get in the race. BURGOO and ABE FURST appear to have an edge on the others.

THIRD RACE—KELTWICK has shown good form here after taking a rest and will be hard to beat among these. The other two-thirds of the principal speed is found among the also eligibles and consists of KILMORE and MODESTO. Both will have to move up a lot to even see action.

FOURTH RACE—HARUM SCARUM loves distance but prefers a fast track. Indications are that the course will approach a fast condition today and this fellow should be ready to make full use of the opportunity to win at a price. The route is a mile and a half. BUCK HERO and ALLEGRETTO are the ones to beat and would be one, two in the mud, I believe.

FIFTH RACE—I'm picking one in this and then I'm going to duck. It's none other than TRY IT. What a piece of running machinery this one is when the goods are down! I've watched this gelding from all angles and believe this is a chance for him to break into the big time. There's oceans of speed in the field and I can see them now, running each other into the ground. If they do, TRY IT may pick up all of them in the stretch. PIGEON HOLE and HILLSBOROUGH for the rest.

SIXTH RACE—LERACK, an old Maryland friend, gets my call in this. Is on the improve and may lead CHAT EAGLE to the wire. YANKAWAY is another that is moving up and is my third choice.

SEVENTH RACE—BARASHKOVA looks like a short priced winner here. JACK BIENER and EVELINE F appear the most likely to battle it out for the place award.

Company F Beaten By Atlas Tossers

Guards' Rally in Second Half Short and D. C. Five Wins, 27-25.

With A. Scheele bombarding the basket to the tune of 12 points, the Atlas quintet scored a soul-stirring 27-to-25 victory over Company F, Hyattsville National Guard, yesterday afternoon on the latter's court, after staving off a determined second half splurge by the Soldiers.

Speeding up their passing and shooting attacks and displaying an airtight defense in the final period, the Company F cagers stepped out with a sensational brand of basket ball that baffled their opponents to such an extent that Atlas was able to garner but two points. With possible defeat staring them in the face, the Atlas guards rallied in the crucial moments to beat back the Soldiers' advance and to emerge victors by a two-point margin.

Bassford and Sticknall, with 6 and 5 points, respectively, featured for Company F.

In the preliminary game, Richards turned back the Shade Shop, 36 to 21, with Kidwell heading the assault with 14 points. Richards set the pace at the turn, being ahead, 13 to 10.

Hialeah to Guard Against "Ringers"

Horses Entered in Winter Meet, as Well as Owners, Must Be Identified.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hialeah Park, Miami, Fla., Jan. 1.—Racing Secretary McLennan has put new iron-clad rules on identification of horses for the winter meeting, eliminating the possibility of "ringing."

The new rule: "No horse shall be permitted to start that has not been fully identified. Responsibility in the matter of establishing ownership shall be as binding on the persons so identifying or undertaking to establish it as it is on the person having the horse requiring identification, and the same penalty shall apply to them in case of fraud or attempt at fraud."

Before the entry of any horse will be accepted for racing at the Hialeah meeting, the owner of such horse must satisfactorily identify himself to the stewards of the Miami Jockey Club, proving that he is the individual that he represents himself to be, and making himself sufficiently well known to the officials for them to feel sure that the horse that he starts is the horse that he enters.

Two-year-olds which have never been started at this meeting will be permitted to start only upon producing the original certificate of registration showing colors and markings to correspond.

"RUDE RUDY" IS RUDE TO JUDSON

Dusek Calls Mat Foe of Thursday Night a "Softie."

ACCUSING his sleek-haired, up-to-the-minute opponent, heroic Frank Judson, of playing to the grand stand, "Rude Rudy" Dusek is marking time prior to Thursday night's rassle show at Washington Auditorium.

On that occasion, if Dusek's word means anything, Judson will be definitely checked as a contender for Jim Londos' title.

Offered another crack against Londos in the event he wins, Dusek says:

"Neither Steele nor myself were hard-boiled enough for Judson in previous matches. Maybe we underestimated him.

Not Protecting "Softies," Says Dusek.

"Thursday night, however, will find me at my best. I'm not protecting 'softies,' and I certainly have no intention of making Judson look good."

That Dusek's antipathy for Judson is sincere is vouched for by the former Harvard coach.

"I'll show Dusek that I can take him legitimately," Judson claims. "He claims that my previous 30-minute decision was trickery. A finish bout will prove conclusively who's who!"

In the scheduled 45-minute semi-final, Ray Steele wrangles with that Indian sensation, "Blue Son" Jennings.

In the 30-minute special feature, "Tiny" Ruff, Kansas plowboy, substitutes against John Maxos.

REVOLTA WINNER IN MIAMI OPEN

fessionals he won the pro title of the State in 1931.

Of tournament nerve he has plenty. Of golfing skill, plenty also. Revolta, the experts predict, will cut a swath across professional golf wider, perhaps, than did Shute—the Missouri wonder a few years ago.

At the finish of today's play Revolta said: "I'm glad I came South. I had not planned on coming here, but a friend of mine persuaded me."

Revolta Gets in the Money.

Since coming South, he has earned $1,900 in two tournaments, getting $1,250 for second place in the Miami Biltmore, and $650 today.

Posing for pictures, Revolta had trouble breaking his customary serious look as the cameramen said "Smile, Johnny, smile."

Walter Hagen, sitting nearby, said "Why, heck, anybody who gets a check these days ought to be able to smile."

Revolta did.

Revolta's winning cards as compared with par were:

Events in ten sports are listed on the program to be presented today at the annual "open house" day of the Y. M. C. A. at its headquarters, 1736 G street northwest. The public is invited. The first event is scheduled at 2:30 and the program will go forward until about 8 o'clock.

The senior "Y" five will clash with the A. G. O. quintet in the feature basket ball game at 2:30 o'clock. Volley ball and touch football games will be contested in the afternoon. A swimming meet, water polo and life saving exhibition are other features on the card.

VIRGINIA A. C. ELEVEN IN 0-0 TIE

Baltimore 135-Pound Champs Draw Big Alexandria Crowd.

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 1.—The Virginia A. C., of this city, ended its football season today in a blaze of glory by fighting the Curtiss Bay A. C., of Baltimore, 135-pound champions of that city, to a scoreless tie. The game was played on a field of frozen turf before one of the largest crowds of the season.

Both teams advanced the ball to their opponents' 10-yard line but on each occasion lost the pigskin on downs when it was immediately kicked out of danger. In the third period, line plunges and end runs by Peaches and Rummy, advanced the oval to the Virginia's 10-yard line, where the advance was halted.

Virginia Stopped at 10-Yard Line.

The Virginians, after an exchange of punts, took the ball on their 50-yard line and in the first play Pullman passed to Ewald, who traveled to the 20-yard line before being hauled down. Two plunges and an end run by Fones carried to the 10-yard line but there the attack was bottled up.

43 DISABLED AIDED BY FEDERAL BOARD

Rehabilitated and Placed in Jobs During 1932; Many Now Being Helped.

Forty-three persons in the District of Columbia, disabled as a result of accident or disease, were rehabilitated and placed in employment through the program of the Federal Board for Vocational Education in 1932, the annual report of the board, made public yesterday, disclosed.

Thirty-nine types of jobs were filled by the 43 aided by the board. These ranged from bookkeeping and carpentry, to chemistry and dental mechanics. Three hundred and sixteen other persons are still in process of rehabilitation, the report shows.

The average time required to rehabilitate the 43 persons referred to in the report, was said to be one year and five months. The average age was 31 years, it was declared, while the average cost per person, exclusive of administration, was $97.80. Average weekly wage was found to be $20.25 after rehabilitation against $5.45 before.

Lack of funds, the report states, made it impossible to provide during the year for many disabled persons urgently in need of help. This was true, it was related, in 54 cases. Another factor affecting the operation of the board's work was the influx of large numbers of unemployed persons to the District, this rendering difficult the problem of getting work for those rehabilitated.

German Leaders Are Optimistic

Both Hindenburg and Von Schleicher See 1933 Prospects Bright.

Berlin, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A distinct note of optimism was discernible today in the speeches with which Germany's leaders ushered in 1933. Both President Von Hindenburg and Chancellor Von Schleicher, in an exchange of congratulations, indicated their belief that the Reich's future now appears somewhat brighter, although, they agreed, there is much hard work ahead.

The 85-year-old soldier-president, leaning lightly on his ebony cane as as greeted diplomats who called to pay their respects, astonished them by his apparently undiminished vigor.

This morning President Von Hindenburg stood at the door of the old chancellery, his temporary home, and received the report of the guard of honor. Subsequently, he greeted the traditional deputation of "Halloren," the salt mine workers of Halle, who were dressed in medieval garb.

Lincoln Milk Strike Averted by Agreement

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Lincoln averted a milk strike today as it swung into the new year. J. L. White, president of the Lincoln Non-Stock Cooperative Milk Producers Association, before dawn announced the organization had called off its strike scheduled to start today.

After conferring for hours, representatives of four milk distributing companies here agreed to sign contracts to buy only from members of the association and at slightly higher prices. The distributors agreed the retail price of milk would remain seven cents a quart.

Carrier-Belleuse Dies; Famous French Painter

Paris, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Pierre Carrier-Belleuse, a noted painter, died here today at the age of 82.

M. Carrier-Belleuse, who was born in Paris in 1851, was an officer of the Legion of Honor and a cavalier in the Order of Leopold of Belgium. He was the son of a sculptor. He worked mostly with pastels. Among his subjects were dancers, nude figures and portraits, of which several were purchased by the state and placed in various museums in France and abroad.

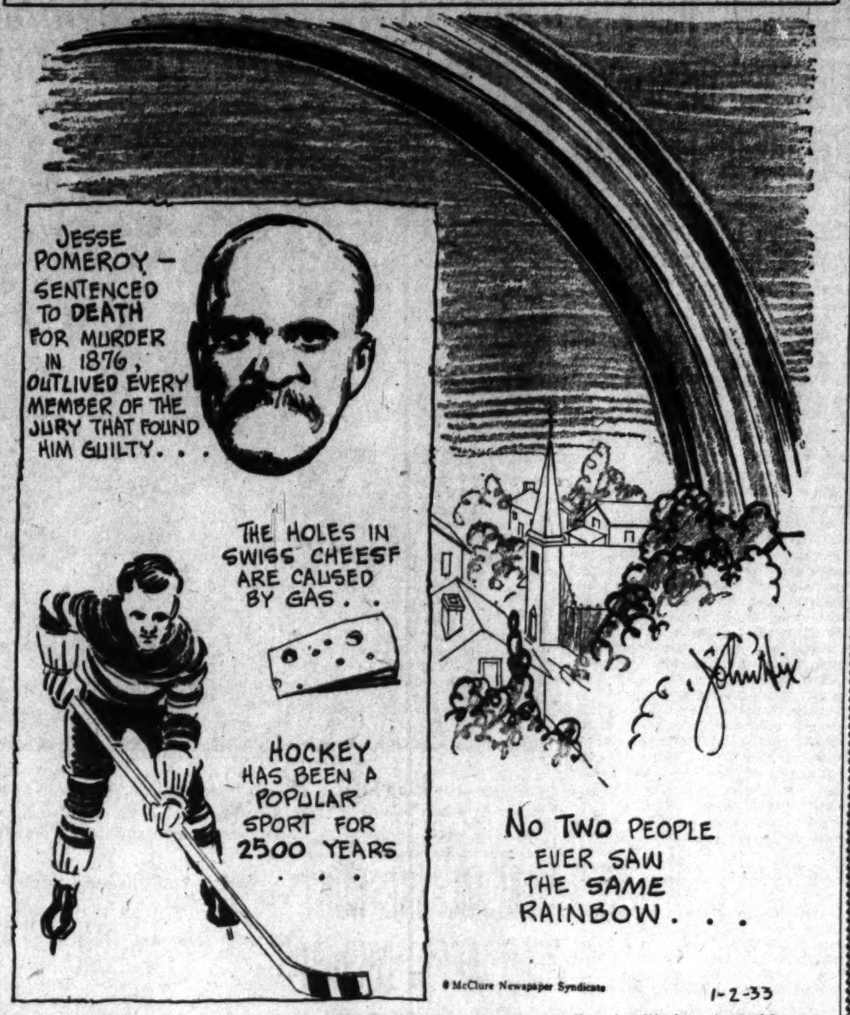
STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix



© McClure Newspaper Syndicate 1-2-33

THE mystery of the atmospheric phenomena which we see as rainbows in a moisture-laden sky has been explained by science as the result of sunlight refracted in rain drops and then reflected to the earth. The refraction breaks up the light into its component parts—that is, into the colors of the spectrum—giving the rainbow its multitude of colors. Reflection brings it within the vision of the spectator.

A person standing at any one point sees the rainbow as segments of concentric circles, which have a common center on a straight line passing through the sun and the eye of the spectator. For a primary rainbow, one with red on the outside and violet on the inside, the angle of elevation above this imaginary line on which the circles center is 42 degrees. Every time a person moves he sees a different rainbow, and because their points of vision are at no time the same no two people can see the same rainbow.

Found guilty by a jury of his peers and condemned to die on the gallows for the murder of a 4-year-old boy, Jesse Pomeroy won clemency because of his youth and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He started his term in 1876 at the age of 14, and lived to see every one of the jurors who found him guilty die. Pomeroy, for his attempted escapes, was kept in solitary confinement for more than 40 years. He died September 29, 1932, in prison.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE BIG DIVORCE SLUMP.

HOW there's a divorce depression. Reno is in a slump. The books for 1932 show an unprecedented drop in the number of people who can afford to change shackles in midstream.

The business of turning the old wife in for whatever a court appraisal will bring fell off so sharply last year in the Metropolis of Matrimonial Free Wheeling that the courts out there are operating without a night shift

All the judges are on the five-day week and are now listening to cases one at a time for a change, and reaching their decisions through a reasonable slow back swing.

Business is so slow in Reno that the courts even have time to check up on the papers and make sure they are divorcing the right people. Only a few years ago the rush was so great that it was necessary to number the contestants.

Things are so bad that Reno is talking of a national advertising campaign to make the American people realize that they are not happily married.

There is the prospect of a Reno Radio Hour, the purpose of which will be put across in the American home the message that popper does not love mommer.

• • •

"And, now, ladies and gentlemen of the great unseen audience," we can imagine the announcer broadcasting, "ask yourselves tonight the simple question, 'Am I happy with my chosen mate, or is Reno always right?' Why cook for the same man all your life? Why not buy an excursion ticket to Reno now and begin life over with a dream prince? See a divorce lawyer at least twice a year."

It is suggested that Reno arrange for excursion rates at once, advertising an "eighteen-day trip, with hotel, meals, lawyer, stenographer's fees and the best judge money can buy. All for $112. Terms arranged by request."

• • •

As a special inducement Reno might offer every accommodation for golf, tennis and archery between hearings, and special music by Deke Whooziss and his Honey Boys Orchestra during all testimony. With dancing during all arguments over legal technicalities.

In times like these you've got to make a divorce trip attractive. It is a well known fact that domestic unhappiness is primarily a luxury. When the wolf is at the door papa is too busy studying wild animal life to realize that mommer is no Helen of Troy.

And mommer is too occupied reading "Forty Recipes for Warmed-Over Dinners" to start worrying because dada and John Gilbert have nothing in common.

• • •

All of which meets with no favorable reaction in Reno. Judges and divorce lawyers must live. We don't know just why.

"And, My Dear...."

Chili has had six presidents in seven months. We'll bet that what the "first ladies" are saying about one another is nobody's business.

Precaution.

And in a country like that it would seem that the moment a president saw anybody on the tee behind him he would immediately signal for him to go through.

Ima Dodo thinks technocracy is a feature of the new 1933 automobile models.

ECONOMIC PARLEY'S FINDINGS DISCLOSED BY BISHOP FREEMAN

Religion's Link in Work for World Recovery Cited in New Year's Talk.

Bishop James E. Freeman, from the pulpit of Washington Cathedral yesterday morning in the course of his New Year sermon, made public for the first time the findings of the recent conference on the social message of the church at the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral, December 28-30, in which a notable group of clergy and prominent laymen discussed economic problems and their solution.

During this College of Preachers conference, this group of leading men listened for three days to economic experts, labor leaders, manufacturers and exponents of technocracy. As a result of their deliberations, they issued a statement from which the bishop quoted yesterday.

The statement sets forth that the conference recognizes that, the authority of the spirit of Jesus Christ extends not only to personal worship and personal morality, but to the whole field of social, industrial, economic and international relationships. The main questions with which it dealt were these:

"Is the present economic depression inevitable in the nature of things, or is it the result of human ignorance and folly and selfishness?

"If it could have been prevented, have we the wisdom and courage to prevent its recurrence? As religious men, we ask, 'What is God's will for His world and ours?' As followers of Christ, we ask, 'Can we in some way apply His principles more fully to the life of the world in our day?'"

Answer to Questions.

In answering these questions the statement of the Conference on the Social Message of the Church continues as follows:

"Whatever may be the causes of this depression, it is world-wide. All peoples and nations are suffering together. No one nation can save itself apart from the others. Isolation and self-sufficiency are not the remedy. Unregulated competition between nations as a method of conducting the world's economic life is not adequate. Such competition has in many respects become the death rather than the life of trade. The world must learn that all men are members one of another.

"The American people may find it difficult to learn this lesson. But they must learn it, for we live in a world which requires world-wide economic cooperation. The time has come when the tariff can no longer be regarded as solely a domestic policy, but must be approached as part of a problem necessitating international agreement.

"They must learn that intergovernmental debts incurred for destructive rather than productive purposes are harmful to debtor and creditor alike.

View on World Court.

"The World Court is established, but we are not yet a part of it. The reign of law must be substituted for the reign of force. God has made of one blood all natinos of men to dwell together The Church of the Prince of Peace must stir the conscience of its own people concerning these things. Only as we Christians are ourselves guided aright can we bring our fellow countrymen to the light."

That there is danger in living in yesterdays rather than today was pointed out by Bishop Freeman during the course of his sermon, which he based on the following text from the seventh chapter of Joshua: "Would to God we had been content and dwelt on the other side of Jordan." Bishop Freeman declared that America could recover its poise despite the destruction of material values by leaning on its own genius and resources and thus making a long stride toward a better future in the New Year.

He pointed out that such statements as that issued by the Conference on the Social Message of the Church at the close of its three-day session illustrate a finer understanding of the church, of economic conditions and a greater readiness to meet and cope with the tremendous problems of the present.

The statement further advocates the extension of social service and the freedom of organization for both employers and employes alike, better housing be available, slum clearance effected, adequate provision made to meet the problems raised in case of sickness, accident and unemployment, as well as pensions for the aged and health service for all.

Tasks Are Cited.

"Meanwhile, there are certain immediate and practical tasks to be done," it is stated further. "Every family must be fed, clothed, sheltered and so saved from fear of want. Even while we do these things, we must remember that relief is not enough. It is too uncertain and too destructive of self-respect. What our world supremely needs is the conservation of human values in consonance with the spirit of Christ."

Among those present at the conference were former Attorney General George W. Wickersham, Alanson B. Houghton, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain; Spencer Miller, of New York, prominent in the industrial world, and the following bishops of the Episcopal Church, besides Bishop Freeman: The Right Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, Suffragan Bishop of New York; the Right Rev. I. P. Johnson, of Colorado; the Right Rev. William G. McDowell, of Alabama; the Right Rev. Warren L. Rogers, of Ohio; the Right Rev. William Scarlett, of Missouri, and the Right Rev. Frank Elmer Wilson, of Wisconsin.

Among the leading clergymen from all parts of the country present were the Rev. Spence Burton, Cambridge, Mass.; the Rev. Dr. Russell Bowie, New York; the Rev. Dr. Charles Clingman, Birmingham, Ala.; the Rev. Dr. Fleming James, New Haven, Conn.; the Rev. Dr. Howard Melish, Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Rev. Dr. D. A. McGregor, Evanston, Ill.; the Rev. Dr. Norman B. Nash, Cambridge, Mass.; the Rev. Dr. Frank Nelson, Cincinnati, Ohio; the Rev. Dr. Henry Disbrow Phillips, Columbia, S. C., and the Rev. Dr. George Richardson, Peterborough, N. H., and the Rev. Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell, president of St. Stephen's College, Annandale-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., as well as the following laymen: Charles C. Burlingham, New York; Jasper Davis, New York, and Henry Goddard Leach, also of New York.

826 Fire Alarms in December Set Mark; Rescue Squad Also Establishes Record

Fire!

From throughout the city, in volume to shatter all existing records for a one-month period, this chill-inspiring cry has reached the District of Columbia Fire Department.

Never, in the department's all-time records, have as many fire alarms been received in a one-month period, as were those in December.

But despite the number of alarms turned in, the month's record did not see a fire of major proportions nor was a loss of life or serious injury reported.

From the first day of December until midnight Saturday, 826 fire alarms were sounded. Of these 176 were sent from street corner boxes and 650 were called over the telephone.

And while the fire fighters were thus engaged, members of the Rescue Squad, bent on errands of mercy, also were piling up a record of their own.

In an all-time record of 319 calls, these members of the department have written into their log book incidents packed with tragedy, comedy and pathos.

Lieut. A. C. Kefauver, in charge of the squad, explained that a portion of the new mark was compiled during the "hunger marchers'" visit.

During that time, he said, the squad ambulance no more than returned to its quarters when another call was received. In one day's service the crew remained on the ambulance for eight hours.

The month of July, crowded with the daily tragic events of summer sports, saw only 265 emergency calls, as compared with the new mark.

The greatest number of fire alarms received during a previous period came in March, with 699 calls.

Only a small percentage of the alarms were false, it was declared.

Youth Burned Dragging Out Blazing Yule Tree

Raymond Healey, 17-year-old Eastern High School student, was burned about the face and hands yesterday afternoon as he hurriedly dragged a blazing Christmas tree to the outside from his home at 1012 Fifth street northeast.

The tree took fire in some unknown manner as young Healey was passing through the front room of his home. Seeking to prevent the flames spread to other articles in the room, he jerked the tree from its moorings and lugged it to the open air. In doing so he sustained the burns. Fire apparatus quickly extinguished the blaze.

SPORTSMEN AIRMEN ARE DUE TOMORROW

To Reach Washington From New York, Have Lunch and Proceed to Miami.

Weather permitting more than fifty sportsmen pilots are expected to fly here tomorrow from New York en route to Florida as participants in the Second Annual Winter Cruise and the Florida Year-Round Clubs Handicap Race. The large group of planes is scheduled to arrive at College Park Airport, between 11:30 and noon. The pilots will lunch at the local field as guests of Chester H. Warrington, local automobile dealer and prominent sportsman flier who will join the cruise here.

At least two other local men also will participate in the flight to Miami.

They are Crosby A. Boyd, local newspaperman, and C. W. Henderson, of 1601 Argonne place northwest. And it is expected that several other Washington names will be found in the list of last minute entries now being received at cruise headquarters in New York. Of the local men who have already entered, Warrington and Boyd fly Stinson planes and Henderson will compete in a Fairchild.

Tomorrow after luncheon the group will fly to Richmond, where they will spend the night. Leaving there at 8:20 a. m. Wednesday, they are due in Greensboro, N. C., two hours later, and thence they will go to Augusta, Ga., and to Jacksonville, Fla., where they will spend the second night.

Last-minute applications have raised the number of contestants from 33 to 66, by far the greatest number ever to participate in an event for sportsmen pilots.

The large entry list may be attributed in part to the Florida Year-Bound Clubs Handicap, a 240-mile cross-country race, to be flown between Daytona Beach and Miami on the last lap of the cruise. Henry L. Doherty, financier, inventor and president of the Florida Year-Round Clubs, has posted the Henry L. Doherty Trophy and $2,500 in cash as awards.

In Florida a large number of the fliers will participate in the Miami All-American air races on January 5-7.

The shooting occurred during an altercation between the two men. Three small children of Fagiola's were in the home and witnessed the shooting. Their mother died about a year ago.

PESSIMISM IS HIT BY FATHER SMITH ON CATHOLIC HOUR

Perfect Happiness Reserved for Next World, He Says Over Radio.

The "apostles of gloom," who go about complaining of their troubles and informing every one that all happiness is a delusion, were assailed yesterday by the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, noted Dominican preacher, in the first of a series of nine sermons on "Christ and the Delusions of 1933," on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour.

The sermon was broadcast from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The Rev. Francis J. Hurney presided. The services included blessing of the sick and the solemn Lourdes procession at the Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes.

Father Smith said, in part:

"In the midst of the joyful hopes with which this day rings there is one discordant note. This year it sounds more jarringly than ever. It is sounded by the pessimist, who cries out that happiness is a delusion. He is worthy of some attention because of the lessons that he can teach.

Attacks Grumblers.

"There are some who by temperament seem more inclined to mull over the black and sordid things of life. Their happiness is found in the lugubrious, in the melancholy, in being sad. There are others who reach this state through disappointment and despair. They have lost the secret of finding happiness amid misery and they live lives of protest against what they term a cruel fate.

"They intone a constant dirge of mumbling, grumbling and complaining which deafens them to the finer and the happier things of life. These apostles of gloom are very numerous on this New Year's Day, but they are of ancient lineage. They peep around the corner of every turn in the history of thought. They speak today from the classroom, from the office, from the work bench, and sometimes from the pulpit. Their theme song throughout the ages and today is 'Happiness is a delusion.' I repeat their rancid ravings merely to show the silliness of them.

Perfect Happiness Later.

"This world is not supposed to be a place of complete and unalloyed bliss and joy. The state of perfect happiness is reserved for the next world. But why in pessimistic mood ignore the inexhaustible benefits conferred on mankind by the limitless resources placed in this world by the Creator? It is evident that the world has done a better job for human happiness than have the individuals to whom its treasures have been entrusted. The world continues to yield more than enough to feed the peoples of the earth, but human brains have fallen down before the task of distribution.

"The world, under the lash of scientific investigation, continues to unfold myriad forces for the progressive happiness of mankind. It has done well by us. True there are calamities, but even these have their value for the totality of human happiness. From them we learn to harness the forces of the earth. From them arise those mighty manifestations of charity and kindliness that redeem our confidence in human nature. Through them is created that community of feeling and democracy of service without which this would be a bleak place in which to live."

Man Attempts Suicide, Turning on Gas Stove

Harry E. Lee, 36, of 1121 East Capitol street southeast, attempted suicide early yesterday by turning on the gas jets of the stove in the kitchen of his home, according to Fourth Precinct police, who attributed the act to alcoholism.

Lee was removed to Gallinger Hospital and treated for gas poisoning and alcoholism. His condition was not thought to be serious at the time.

Woman's Apartment Looted.

Pauline Sonthe, 2701 Fourteenth street northwest, told police last night that her apartment had been entered early yesterday and clothing and jewelry worth $108 taken.

ALUMNI OF CENTRAL WILL GATHER TODAY

Basket Ball Game to Be One of Afternoon Features; Heads to Be Named.

The Central High School Alumni Association will hold its twenty-fourth annual reunion at the high school today. A varied program, beginning with a business meeting at 1:30 p. m., will be presented.

Officers will be elected at the first session. At 2 o'clock the alumni basket ball team will play the school team.

A swimming meet and rifle match, in which both students and alumni will participate, are scheduled during the afternoon. Certificates of distinction will be awarded students for sport and study activities at 3:30 p. m. by Maj. William E. R. Covell, a former president of the alumni association.

Bridge parties and a luncheon in the school lunchroom are also slated for the reunion. Officers of the association are L. V. Lampson, president; Mrs. C. E. Phillips, secretary, and Prof. H. H. Burroughs, treasurer.

Woman, 26, Attempts Suicide With Poison

The advent of the new year evidently failed to brighten the outlook for Mary Cantor, 26, 5502 Illinois avenue northwest. She swallowed poison in the bathroom of her home early yesterday.

Treated by an interne on the Emergency Hospital ambulance, she later was pronounced out of danger.

Man Is Found in Street; Case Veiled in Mystery

An air of mystery last night surrounded Daniel J. McCarty, 60, who was found by an unidentified taxicab driver early yesterday, unconscious, lying on the street in the downtown section.

At Gallinger Hospital, where McCarty was taken for treatment for alcoholism after being booked at the First Precinct Station, he was found to be suffering from a possible skull fracture. Although the man gave his address as 1010 Tenth street northwest, occupants of the house denied knowing him.

NEW YEAR'S HILARITY IS CALLED HANGOVER OF GODLESS HOLIDAY

Dr. Schnabel Says U. S. Has Forgotten Christ in Material Greed.

"The wild orgies of New Year's Eve are nothing more or less than the hangover of a Christless Christmas," declared the Rev. George E. Schnabel, of the Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, preaching yesterday morning at a special New Year's service.

The subject of the Rev. Schnabel's talk was "What Can You Expect of the New Year When Your Christ Child Is Only a Santa Claus?" He said, in part:

"New years are born of old years. The old year falls into the ground and dying it gives birth to a new year. The old year is the seed. If the seed is good the new year will be good; if the seed is bad the new year will be bad. The law of sowing and reaping applies here as everywhere. A Christless old year means a Godless new year, with all its bitterness and defeat. There is no magic about January the first that transforms the onrushing days of 1933 into days unlike those of 1932.

Chance to Start Right.

"We welcome every opportunity to clean the slate, to turn the new page, to start all over again, but starting the New Year without Christ simply means repeating the Old Year with all its mistakes, its pain, its suffering, its regrets and questionings. What we need today is not so much a New Year, but a new grip on God. A rightful sense of the dignity of living usefully and enthusiastically is one of our chief needs.

"There is something radically wrong with us when we sacrifice the spirit of the shepherds and the wise men for the tinsel of a Christmas tree or other expensive toys of which our children soon tire. That is what has been done by multitudes whose sole symbol of this Holy Day is a silver ball wrapped in tinsel, that can be crushed with ease by even the smallest member of the family. Many have substituted the star atop the Christmas tree for the Star of Bethlehem.

Happiness in Christ.

"When we leave Christ out of Christmas we miss our greatest opportunity to give Christ the place He so justly deserves in the life of childhood and youth. There is nothing else that can compensate for it. There is no substitute. We are more than remiss when we neglect this opportunity. But many parents today are so completely absorbed in the material affairs of life that they have no time for the spiritual.

"The discontent and meanness, disappointment and despair, seen upon the faces of people today tells the story of a Santa Claus who failed them, whose toys ran out, who grew tired. Real happiness, real joy, real purpose in life alone are the gifts of the Manger and the Cross. Will we go into the new year with the Christ Child?"
